Thought That the Governor Will Respite Him,

R COMMUTE HIS SENTENCE

There Was a Hearing in His Behalf Before the Governor Yesterday.

COV. ATKINSON WILL ACT TODAY

Has Given No Intimation of What His Decision Will Be.

AN EVENTFUL DAY FOR CARR

Rev. Sam Jones Pays a Visit to the Condemned Man.

HE THINKS CARR IS DECIDEDLY CRAZY

Carr Talks Ramblingly of His Dreams and the Experiences He Has Had. The Day's Developments.

The ugly red gallows at the county jail will not, it is almost certain, take the life of Alex Carr Friday.

It is thought to be settled that the govemor will grant him a respite or commute his sentence to life imprisonment. The fate t Carr had resigned himself to may be ed by the governor's action.

During the hearing vesterday afternoon vernor Atkinson suggested that he ould hear argument in favor of a commutation. He intimated that if the Carr jury would sign a petition asking for a commutation on certain grounds it would be consid-

That a reprieve will be granted today or morrow seems probable.

The second day of Carr's new life was an eventful one.

From morning until night happenings of intense interest transpired and when the shades of darkness hovered over the city last night the remarkable man who has created the sensation of the hour sought put upon him.

It was a day of speech for Carr. Hour after hour he-told the story of his strange life. It never seemed to tire him, but when the last visitor left him last night his nerves were unstrung and he plainly showed that he felt the severe trials of the meet his fate. Yesterday he shrank from the grim prospect of death. He pleaded for help. Life, life is what he craved. "Oh, only for a few more days of life," he said He is not ready. He would give all the world for life.

"Yesterday I thought I was ready. I had been promised forgiveness by the Lord. He has gone back on me. I know He has, because I dreamed it this morning. I have lost all hope. I have none either in this world or the next. Please do what you can to get me more time so that I can repen and get forgiveness."

Didn't Remember Colonel Arnold. Those were the first words spoken by Carr to his attorney, his defender and his friend, Colonel Reuben Arnold, when that gentleman made himself known to his client in the jail office yesterday morning Carr did not remember Colonel Arnold, although the attorney spent many weeks working and talking in his behalf. During the entire acquaintance and intercourse between attorney and client only one particular thing impressed itself on the mind of the murderer. A day or two after his arrest in August, 1894, he asked Colonel Arnold to get him out of prison on bond. That request made shortly after the commission of the terrible crime was spoken

so earnestly and fervently that it marked an indelible imprint on the mind of the man who made it.

His Only Hope Here. For two hours and a half yesterday afternoon the cause of Carr was being pleaded before the only man in the land who can save him from a disgraceful and terrible leath on the hangman's gallows. That mar was begged to have mercy on the poor unfortunate man who, by his remarkable actions, has startled a city, a state and more, a nation. Governor Atkinson is that man. Sitting in his accustomed chair in his private office at the capitol he listened attentively to the pleas in behalf of Carr. With the consciousness of his power written on his every feature the governor of Georgia listened and reasoned. A human life was at stake. By the signing of his name he could save or condemn that life. No wonterested in what was being said, While that last effort for worldly help was being made for Carr his spiritual advisers prayed for him in his presence at the jail. Ministers of the gospel raised their voices in behalf of the soul of the condemned man at the same moment the governor was being asked to aid Carr in this world. The contrast of the two happenings was strange. Carr pleaded for life and mercy in this world and at the same time pleaded with the Lord for forgiveness for his sins, that he might go to the next world saved.

Mr. Jones Says Carr Is Crazy. Rev. Sam Jones talked to Carr and pray ed for him while Colonel Arnold pleaded his case before the governor. Mr. Jones and other ministers visited the condemned man late in the afternoon and remained behind closed doors with Carr for some time. All prayed for the prisoner and begged for forgiveness for him. Mr. Jones left Carr after having formed the opinion that the man is crazy. He thinks that Carr's mind is befuddled and unsound. He says that the man is incoherent and full of dreams, his mind wandering in a disconnected manner. With Mr. Jones were Rev. Dr. Kendall, Rev. R. V. Atkisson and Mr. The ministers visited Carr T. J. Kelly. to render him such comfort as was in their power It was the wish of Carr that he might meet and talk with Mr. Jones. He said that he wanted the noted evangelist to pray to him. When he told Mr. Kelly yesterday morning that such was his desire that gentleman at once invited the minister to visit Carr and with those mentioned the prisoner was seen in the jail office. Mr. Jones studied the characteristics of the man in the room and when he left Carr it was with the firm belief that the condemned man's mind is not sound.

Told Them of His Dreams. To the ministers who talked to him Car repeated the wild imaginings of his sense in dreams and the ministers listened attentively. Carr told them how he had been warned to talk. How he had dreamed o a dose to ease his mind and body and the forgiveness of the Lord and how that

CUBA'S CAUSE WELL ESPOUSED

Mills Spoke for His Joint Resolution in the Senate.

MINCED NO

Scored a Number of Strong Points in

DESIGNATED GENERAL WEYLER AS ATROCIOUS

Reviewed the Louisiana Purchase and Compared the Situation of Then with Now.

Washington, March 24.-The matter of chief interest in the senate today was the speech of Mr. Mills, in support of his joint resolution requesting the president to procure from the Spanish government the right of self-government for Cuba, or, in the event of Spain's refusal, to take mili tary possession of the island and hold it until the Cubans organize a government and raise military and naval forces for its defense.

Mr. Mills took the ground that inasmuch as the United States would not permit England. France or any other country to purchase or obtain the island from Spain and thus to ameliorate the condition of its inhabitants, the United States was morally bound to put a stop to the cruelties and misgovernment there and to aid the Cubans to establish a government of their own. This idea was elaborated by Mr. Mills in a passionate speech, which, at imes, drew applause from the galleries.

He asserted that the United States had rights, not only in Cuba, but in every foot of soil in the western hemisphere; that that was the Monroe doctrine; that that doctrine was as old as humanity, and that God Almighty was its author, as it was the right of self-preservation.

"The United States should say to Spain," Mr. Mills exclaimed: "You must give that island self-government or we will.' And we are able to do it, too."

After Mr. Mills's speech some additiona correspondence bearing on the Cubar question was brought forward by Mr. Morgan, and the joint resolution was placed on the calendar.

The rest of the day was given up to the consideration of the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill. Without a final disposition of it the senate at 5:30 o'clock adjourned until tomorrow. Reviewed the Louisiana Purchase.

Mr. Mills in opening his speech upon his joint resolution said he would have voted for all the resolutions offered on the subject of Cuba because they were steps-although short steps-in the line of march which it was the duty of the people of the United States to take.

The United States had never asserted that it had any rights in Ireland. Hungary. Poland or elsewhere in Europe, but it had asserted its rights in every solitary acre of land on the western hem Mr. Mills reviewed the declarations of

President Jefferson in relation to the Louisiana purchase, when the American minister to France was instructed to notify Napoleon that if he would not sell the erritory to the United States the United States would ally itself to Great Britain and sweep the French fleets off the ocean in order to maintain the right of the United States to the mouth of the Mississippi river—notwithstanding that France had a perfect title to it.

Mr. Mills also referred to the forced withdrawal of French troops from Mexico on the ground that the planting of a monarchy at the doors of the United States imperiled the existence of free government within the American jurisdiction. Cuba was not only the key of the gulf of Mexico, but was the fortress of America. The fathers of the republic had said for 100 years to Spain, to England, to France, to all the earth: "You shall not touch one litary acre of this land with your sover eignty.'

Scores a Strong Point.

"We have said," Mr. Mills continued "that we will resist, with all the power of this government, the transfer of the island of Cuba to any European power. Jefferson said it. Gallatin said it. John Quincy Adams said it. Henry Clay said it. Martin Van Buren said it. James Buchanar said it. William E. Marcy said it.

"It has been the unchallenged American doctrine that the island of Cuba shall remain with Spain unless it comes to us: that Spain shall hold it in trust; that we shall resist its transfer by the whole powe of the army and navy, and there we have held it for 100 years. And now I come to the point. If we have held that position by an assertion of a moral right to protect ourselves, to secure our own homes, to secure our own commerce and trade or the ocean; if we have said that Cuba shal not go out of the hands of Spain notwith standing that England might say to Cuba 'I will give you the government that I give to Canada; I will give you a parliament an executive of your own selection: I will give you the power to levy your own tax-ation if you please; I will give you home government; I will not interfere except to protect you in case any other power in-terferes with you, yet the United States has stood by as a jailer and has said: "That trade shall not be made."

What We Owe to Cuba. "Wherever there are rights," Mr. Mills continued, "there are corresponding duties. And I say that the people of the United States owe to that oppressed and down-trodden people of Cuba to say to

"The hour has come when you must stop your iniquities. We are responsible for the slavery of that people. We are responsible for every drop of blood you have shed; we are responsible for every dollar you have stolen; our conscience is involved in this matter. Cuba has a right to appeal to us and we intend that you shall give her free govern-

Mr. Mills read a letter detailing atrocities said to have been perpetrated by General Weyler in the last Cuban war and he characterized him as "an atrocious scoundrel" who would not be in Cuba if the United States had drawn her sword, as it was her duty to do, and established a government that would protect helpless families in their homes.

"But this great republic," he exclaimed, "whose light illuminates the world, holds the keys of Spain dangling at her belt, stands at the dungeon door of Spain and compels helpless women to be put in the power of such an atrocious villain as that. It is the duty of the American people to make such an occurrence impossible in any country over which it has even an equitable right."

Bonded Debt Explains It.

Mr. Mills compared the protection which Spain gives to Cuba to that which the hawk gives to the dove, and said that all these atrocities were committed while the United States were acting as jailer and guardian.

They were told that the Cuban government had no habitation or mame; but the Cuban people had voices to cry to the peo-ple of the United States: "Acquit us; de-liver us from this monster, or see that Spain gives us protection."

"Why was it," said Mr. Mills, "that of late years every time an attempt was made to maintain the honor and dignity of the United States some tremendous power began to manifest itself in an opposite di-

Spot of Bloody Guilt. Mr. Stewart suggested an explanation in the fact that Spain owed $1,200,000,000 of ded debt-$300,000,000 of which has a lie on the Cuban revenues.

Mr. Mills recognized that there was something in that explanation.

Securities might fall. There might be five or ten million dollars lost in the United States by the action of the senate and house of representatives in asserting the rights, dignity and honor of the American people. He would spend $100,000,000 in taking the captives from the isle of Pines and lib-erating them, because it was the United States duty to do so. The damned spot of bloody guilt was on the hands of the United States and would not "out." All the waters of the ocean would not wash It away. It was the duty of the United States, Mr. Mills declared, either to pro-tect the people of Cuba or to say to France, England and other European powers: "If you want the island, take it."

But the United States should say to Spain: "You shall give that island self-government or we will."

Poetry Plays Its Part. "And we are able to do it, too," Mr Mills added. He quoted the line from Goldsmith that "Honor fails where commerce long prevails," and said that the opposition to American interference in Cu ban affairs came from those who thought that they had a right to receive a cargo from Cuba and make $100,000 on it, and a right to send a cargo to Cuba and make right to send a cargo to Cuba and make $100,000 on it. These were the things that were poking their heads up all over the country and pleading against "Jingoes." He had received a letter from New York today signed "A Disgusted Democrat," and speaking of him as another fool who had turned jingo like Sherman and Lodge.

Referring to a gospel incident, Mr. Mills spoke of Cuba as "a poor crippie lying at the beautiful gate—lying at the gate of the footsess that commanded the liberties. the fortress that commanded the liberties of the American people, lifting her sunken hands and hollow cheeks and crying with salty tears: 'Help me! Oh, help me, to get out of this dungeon!""

And he said that the Americans would say after a while: "In the name of the mighty republic, rise to your feet." And they would extend their powerful right arm, lift her to her feet and enable her to stand and walk. The United States would say to Cuba in the words of Moore's beautiful song:

'Come, rest in this bosom, my own stricken deer;

Though the herd has fled from thee thy home is still here."

COMPROMISE DISCUSSED. Managers Win in Conference, but Failed To Agree. Washington, March 24.-The managers on the part of the two houses in charge of the Cuban resolutions failed to agree this afternoon and adjourned to meet again tositions were discussed. It was apparent, however, that neither house will adopt the text in toto of the other. The opinion is expressed that the senate conferees will agree to the first and second clauses of the house resolutions, striking out the third clause, which reads:

"Resolved, That the United States has not intervened in struggles bitween any European governments and their colonies on this continent; but from the very close relations between the people of the United States and those of Cuba in consequence of its proximity and the extent of the commerce between the two people the present war is entailing such losses upon the people of the United States that congress is of the opinion that the government of the United States should be prepared to protect the legitimate interests of our citizens by intervention, if necessary."

This will remove the objectionable features discussed during the debate in the ures discussed during the debate in the senate, and it is thought the house will accept the resolutions as so amended.

While members of the conference adhere to the statement that no conclusion was even approximately reached, they all declare that they will report a conclusion that will be satisfactory to both houses and which would be agreed to. They assert with emphasis that the matter is not to be left hanging in the air, for the overwhelming vote in both houses is accepted as an evidence of the sentiment of this congress, that final and positive action of some sort that final and positive action of some sort should be taken, and that the congress should not be frustrated by a few friends of Spain, developed by the debate in the sen-ate. For this reason they say they will agree upon resolutions that must command the respect and support of both houses of

Washington, March 24 .- (Special.)-The erratic Boutelle, of Maine, made another display of himself in the house this after noon in an attempt to reopen the issues of the late war and wave the bloody shirt again over the house. His effort, how-

The bill making eligible for service in the army and navy men who had left the same to serve in the confederate army during the late war was up for discu Boutelle made a vicious speech against it. He attacked the new South Carolina constitution for exempting aged confederate soldiers from taxation and attempted to draw the southern members into the same old debate. The southerners simply laughed at him. But one, Wilson of South Carolina, had anything to say and he simply explained the South Carolina constitu However Boutelle was pounced upon by epublicans, who defended and advocated

The Afternoon Hearing.

The hearing before Governor Atkinson was taken up at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The strange tales recounted by Carr to Colonel Arnold and the newspaper men in the jail in the morning were re-peated to the governor. He asked for all the information and light that could possibly be thrown on the case. He evinced a deep interest in the case and seemed to note in his mind the impressions of Carr formed by those who had talked to him He asked about the manner of the condemned man's speech.

When Colonel Arnold reached the governor's office the chief executive received him and others. Attorney General Terrell occupied a chair opposite the governor and he took an interest in the proceed ings, asking questions and bringing out important points in the case for the benefit of the governor. The father and brother of Carr, Rev. Vaughan, Private Secretary Calloway and others occupied seats in the room when Colonel Arnold arose to make his statement. It seemed that the attorney realized the significance of the effort and that it would be the last speech he would make for his client. The attorney appeared to appreciate the re-sponsibility which devolved upon him and he argued the case carefully, consistently and earnestly throughout.

Colonel Arnold Talks.

"Your excellency, I asked for more time this morning because I had not had an opportunity to talk to my client. The change which came over Carr yesterday astounded me and I wanted to see him before making this last plea for him. I am obliged to you for kindly giving me the time to see Carr. These newspaper gentlemen here and myself went over to the jail to see my client and I tell you the man didn't know me. He actually had no mind to recall me. Before I had talked to him a minute I honestly concluded that the man is crazy as he can be. It took a long time to get him to remember any thing about me, and that was about him asking me to get him out on bond soon after he was arrested. He had forgotten that I defended him at all of his trials He had no recollection of the three weeks I worked for him at the trials.

Crazy as a Loon. "I talked to Carr a while and I became convinced that he is crazy as a loon. Why, the man hasn't any mind at all. He talks wildly and disconnectedly. He jumps from one point to another. I will talks let these gentlemen tell you about the wandering manner of his speech. Carr had no intimation that I was coming to see him and it was a surprise. Before I go on with my argument I would like to have the newspaper reporters who went with me to talk to Carr tell you about how the man acted. They heard what he said and can tell you that Carr didn't know

At this point the representatives of the press told the governor of the meeting in the morning. The story told by Carr and the impressions gained from it were repeated. The governor asked about Carr's manner while telling his story.

Sheriff Barnes Called In.

Sheriff Barnes was called in from the street as he passed and at the request of the governor he told about his talk with Carr in his cell Monday afternoon. He said that he was nonplussed at first. He was surprised and thought Carr a little flighty. He said that Carr didn't seem to realize the crime he had that Carr said that he had no malice against King. The sheriff said that he considered Carr's speech disconnect told about Carr's dread that the sheriff was watching him from above through a hole in the wall. Carr imagined that there was a hole in the ceiling, but such is not the case, the sheriff said. He said that some of the ceiling lathes were broken, but what appeared to be a ho

Rev. Vaughn's Opinion.

Rev. Mr. Vaughn made an earnest talk for Carr. He said that he had known him since boyhood. Once in jail he gave him a Testament and asked Carr to read it. "Alex has always been a half-wit," sa the jail chaplain: "His uncle was an idiot and he has a cousin who is one also. His he has not accepted the word of God. His mind is not balanced and he does not know right from wrong, unless it be in some few things. His mind is clouded. When I talked to him this morning he asked me and Dr. McDonald to pray for him, and we did. When I got up and started to walk away he grabbed me by the arm and said: "Hold on, I pray for

His Father's Plea. Mr. Carr, the father of Alex, then talked for his son. He told about his son's ac tions from boyhood. He said that his mind was off. His son had been insane many times. When Alex was about fourteen years old he got his sister to cut off one of his fingers so that it would be even in length with the others. He did many other peculiar things. Alex couldn't learn anything. One time he went to a pool of water where some boys were in swimming. He was told where the deep part He couldn't swim, but he ran to the deep place and started to jump in anyhow Several grabbed and held him, saving his life. The father said that his son didn't know him yesterday morning.

Dr. Gibson's View.

Dr. J. G. Gibson, the Baptist minister Arnold and Rev. Vaughan told the gover nor of his opinion of Carr. He said tha he had talked with the condemned man in the morning. He said that from that conversation he formed the opinion that there was a serious doubt as to Carr's sanity. At times Carr seemed to talk all right. At others his mind would fly off out of reach. The light would break in on him as he would if he was governor. He said that there was a doubt and that he would Colonel Arnold's Conclusion. Colonel Arnold took the floor again and made the concluding speech in the case. He reviewed the case from the first, going over some of the material evidence in question. He declared that the develop-mnts of the trials proved conclusively that Carr was insane. He said that his clien had shown it at every turn.

"It seems that the hand of God has been placed against this poor unfortunate man," began Colonel Arnold. "His weak agony. He has been troubled in his life.
The boy is not sound in mind. Why, when Alex worked at DeLoach's mill he was the fun of the boys. The workmen would tell him to sandpaper a grindstone and the poor boy would work at that until told to do something else. He got his sister to-cut off his finger so that it would be even with his other fingers. Was there ever a plainer case of insanity than that. Some-body told Alex to shoot King. He didn't load that pistol either. Balley loaded that pistol. Alex didn't bear her these pistol. Alex didn't know how to load a pistol. He was prompted to do what he you that there are few men who will take the insults offered Alex Carr by King who would not resent them. King cursed and abused Carr and treated him like a dog. He treated all of the men that way, and it is not surprising that he at last resented the insult and injury heaped upon him. That money was honestly due upon him. That money was honestly due him. Alex owed his hands and they were all here harrassing him for their m He did not have a cent and unless paid him he could not pay what he owed. Is there any man who could stand all of that and control himself? How would you like to try that? Just think of it, gentlemen. Here was a man who would not pay for honest labor. He was known as a man of that kind. This poor working boy had labored long and hard in that mine. What was due him was all he had in the world, and when a man of that kind needs money he needs it.

Judge Clark Asked It.

"I ask you, governor, not to take Alex's life. I appeal to you to save this crazy man. All I ask is that you save his life. Judge Clark told me to tell you to reprieve Alex's sentence. He sent you that message from his deathbed. He was not satisfied about Carr's mind. Why, every single jufor but one signed this petition for a commutation I have here every one of them except one man. Mr. Hill said that he hoped that you would give the benefit of the doubt to Carr if there was any doubt."

The Governor's Suggestion. "If you desire to do so, colonel, I will al-ow you to argue on the commutation theory and will be glad to hear you," said Governor Atkinson at this point. The sugges-tion had a noticeable effect on those in the room and it seemed to open up a new hope for Alex Carr. It seemed that if the ju-rors would sign a paper to the effect that they believed that Carr killed King in passion the case would take a new turn, Gov-ernor Atkinson having suggested that Colonel Arrold might see the jurors and ask them if they thought Carr had cause to be come aggravated and lose his mind in the heat of insult at the time he shot King. It had been stated that King cursed and abused Carr until he could stand it no longer, resenting the insult at last.

No Aid from Alex.

"I have had no aid from my client in this case, governor. He has been of no help to me, but has injured his prospects by his unfortunate lapse into insanity. He could not tell me anything about his case. I have never had a statement from Alex and he told me more today than I ever expected to hear. I think that his life ought to be spared. I ask for mercy. He was driven to desperation

"Why, when they convicted Alex without a recommendation of mercy a blood verdict was brought in. Myers had been trial then. He was a real murde on trial then. He was a real mardet. He killed deliberately. His crime was for hope of reward. Poor Alex, in his agitation and smarting under the repeated in-sults and abuse of King, fired those shots while his mind was at fever heat. It was not deliberate murder. He walked up to King and wanted to talk to him. King cursed him again and again. Who would not have shot him?

A Human Act of Mercy.

"I thank you, governor, for your kindness to me in this case. You have been generous and careful. I shall never forget your consideration. You are a great gov-ernor of a great state and I know you will do your duty as you conscientiously see it. I think of Alex Stephens now, the man who administered mercy at every hand, and you have shown yourself to be a man of his courage. Extend this poor insane man the hand of mercy. It can't do prisonment. Look at the old man there and think how he will thank you. Save Carr's life and do a human act of mercy.'

The Doctors Agree. The doctors of Atlanta appear to be agreed on one point in the case of Carr. Many of them say that it is possible for a man of iron will and determination that Carr has. They say that the case is a remarkable one, but that if Carr started out to feign insanity he could have do it, provided his physical condition he out. Many who have never seen Carr and who took no part in any of the trials say that the form of Carr's alleged insanity

one which can be assumed for a long time

by a determined man. Dr. J. L. McDaniel, the successor of Dr Gilbert, has observed Carr since assuming office on the 1st of last January. He made up his mind shortly after visiting the jail that Carr was feigning and he told a fact at the time. He would not consent to give his view for publication for reasons best known to himself, but he told some of his friends that Carr was not crazy. He examined the condemned man every day he visited the jail and always found him in good health.

Dr. McDaniel Talks.

"Carr impressed me as a man feigning insanity soon after I came to 'he jail," said Dr. McDaniel yesterday. "I noticed that his flesh was very good, the absence f flabbiness indicating a good digestion.
"I tried to get Carr to talk to me several Tried to get Carr to task to me several times, but he always persistently refused. I tried to look at his eyes, but he always turned his head. Once I stood him on his head, but he twisted and turned so that I could not see his eyes. He never appeared to need medicine of any kind and he lay in his bunk without murmuring.

Carr Remembers Things.

"It is entirely possible for a man to felgn insanity as Carr has done. He may have passed through spells of weak-mindedness but his general condition as to sanity has been fairly good, although he may not be a man of unsound sense. He talks very rational now and the fact that confir my belief is that he has told me about good many things which have happened since I was elected to the office of county physician, bringing me to the fail ofte He told me yesterday that he rem He told me yesterday that he remembered about me standing him on his head. He said that he didn't want me to see his eyes He recalled several other things which occurred and says that he knew what was going on about him, but would no talk because he didn't want to."

They Made No Tests. Dr. J. McF. Gaston, Jr., is of the opinion that Carr is a riddle. He says that Carr contradicts himself in speech and that he shows no emotion. He says that Carr is rational at times, but that again he is irrational, his mind appearing to wander. Dr. Gaston, and Dr. P. E. Murray went to the jail together yesterday to see Carr Dr. Hugh Hagan called at the same time and the three physicians talked to Carr. It was stated in an afternoon paper that the doctors applied tests to Carr, but the doctors deny that the statement was true. They say that no test of any kind was applied. Dr. Hagan thinks that Carr is sane. He says that it is possible for a strong man to feign a long time. He was of the same opinion at the insanity trial of Carr before the ordinary.

What Dr. Elkin Says. Dr. W. S. Elkin says that a man can feign insanity for a longer time than Carr has. He says that it requires a strong constitution and will power, but with those characteristics a man could stand the trial

Dr. T. O. Powell, who was one of the five sanity experts who examined Carr in February, told his colleagues in that work that if Carr ever got from under his spell might be able to remember everything that happened before lapsing in it. He said that if Carr regained his mental fac-ulties he might be able to tell what he saw and heard and suffered during the time of his insanity. He had known of cases where such was the case, he said. That statement made by Dr. Powell at the time stated appears to bear on the present case. Sam Jones with Carr.

Rev. Sam Jones, Rev. Dr. Kendall, Rev. Dr. Atkisson and Mr. T. J. Kelly visited Carr at the request of the latter. It was to Mr. Kelly that Carr expressed his wish yesterday morning to see Mr. Jones and the visit was arranged for the afternoon.

About 5 o'clock the ministers and Mr. Kelly alighted from a carriage in front of the jail and went in.

The visitors were shown in the office, where Carr had been receiving company all come in and interrupt the service and the doors were closed. The ministers prayed for Carr and talked to him for an hour and a half. It was 6:30 o'clock when they came out of the room. Carr followed them and he then went back to his cell tired out. He had been overstrained during the day and the jailers would not allow any

Says He Is Crazy.

All of the four gentlemen are of one opin ion as to Carr's condition. All believe that the man is crazy. They firmly believe that Carr is of unsound mind and a fit subject Carr is of unsound mind and a fit subject for an asylum. Mr. Kelly reached that con-clusion when Carf told his story in the cell Monday afternoon. Mr. Jones and the other ministers became convinced that Carr is weak minded by talking to him. Carr is weak minded by talking to him.
"Why, that man is crazy as he can be," said Mr. Jones when he came out of the room. "He has no control over his mind.
It wanders. It seems that the man's brain is bemuddled. He is incoherent. He talks wildly, weirdly. Those dreams are the product of a amixed intellect. He cannot talk intelligently. He disconnects his language. digently. He disconnects his language. is trying hard to tell the truth and re-t, but the condition of his mind is most him. He dreams like no sane man

May Call on the Governor.

When the ministers left the room they were net by the aged father of Carr. He spoke to them and asked Mr. Kelly to get spoke to them and asked Mr. Kelly to get Mr. Jones and the other ministers to go before Governor Atkinson and tell him about fore Governor Atkinson and tell him about Alex. He said that he hoped they would go and try to help his son. He would be so thankful to them. And it is very probable that the request of the troubled old man will be granted. The ministers may call on Governor Atkinson this morning and tell him of the conclusion and impressions made by their visit to the condemned man.

Decision Today. Governor Atkinson said last night that it was very probable that he would make up his mind about the case today. He will perhaps issue an order of some kind unless he decides to hands off and let Carr hang. In he decides to hands off and let Carr hang. In view of the statement he made to Colonel Arnold to the effect that if the jurors would sign the paper about the condition of Carr as to whether he acted on passionate impulse when he shot King the point would be considered in connection with the petition for commutation of the sentence, it is not believed that the governor will allow Carr to be hanged. He stated that he would give Colonel Arnold time to get up the evidence and any other evidence he might think of.

Respite Probable.

It is believed by many that the governo will respite Carr for a time sufficient to ob-serve and reach a final conclusion as to his pretent condition. Many think the man inpretent condition. Many think the man insane, and until the point is settled beyond doubt it seems that there will not be a ranging. It was suggested to the governor that a respite long enough to show what turn Carr's mind will take might solve the problem. Many who believed that Carr was feigning until he confessed are now of the opinion that he is insane. They argue that no sane man would throw away a chance for life at the last moment, as it looked as if Carr had done. The case is pronounced on all sides to be the most remarkable brought to the attention of the people of the state in many years.

Dr. Hagan Thinks Carr Sane Dr. Hagan Thinks Carr Sana

Among the few physicians who have maintained from the beginning that Carr was sane is Dr. Hugh Hagan, the wellwas sane is Dr. Hugh Hagan, the well-known specialist on nervous and mental diseases. Dr. Hagan was summoned before the ordinary to give expert evidence at the time of the investigation as to Carr's sanity before Judge Calhoun. Dr. Hagan maintained rigidly at that time that Carr was feining and he expressed the belief that there was no doubt as to his sanity. Dr. Hagan, having made a speciality in nervous diseases and having had special opportunity to study the various phases of mental diseases in the asylums of Europe, to which, as a student at Vienna, he made frequent visits for the purpose of study, his evidence made considerable impression at the time. But the preponderance of expert testimony that Carr was insane was such as to cause the jury to bring in a verdict to that effect, though it is said there was considerable misgiving among its members at the $2.00 SPECIAL SALE Ladies' Low Shoes time.

It was due probably to Dr. Hagan's testimony, more than to anything else, that the verdict in the Osborn insanity case, tried three years ago before Ordinary Calhoun, declared Osborn to be of sound mental

At that time many experts and promi-nent physicians declared that Osborn was nsane, but the clearness of Dr. Hagan's vidence was such as to induce a contrary ict.

Dr. Baird, whose minority report of the expert investigation, made at the governor's request, was published yesterday, also believed Carr to be sane. Dr. Knott took similar position with Dr. Baird and has maintained all along that Carr was sane. Dr. Gilbert, the county physician, has done likewise. From the very beginning this has been Dr. Hagan's conclusion and after giving his testimony at the trial before the ordinary he has maintained it steadily since, even after the report of the expert committee. The investigation was conducted by authority of the governor.

His Mind Wanders.

Among the many prominent physicians

Among the many prominent physicians who visited the condemned man yesterday was Dr. Price E. Murray, of this city, and from the result of that gentleman's observations the fact is strongly apparent that

Carr is insane. In speaking of his visit Dr. Murray said last evening: "At the time of the cor sion of the deed by Carr, and up to six months ago, I felt certain of the sanity of the man, but when, some weeks ago, a jury composed of some of the best physicians o Atlanta and the ctate, with experience eases of the mind, met and after a thorough examination into the mental condition of the doomed man adjudged Carr insane, of irsanity, knowing their high stan their profession and that they had brought bear their most scientific tests.

"Then, too, six months ago I began to become apprehensive as to the mental condition of the man. Knowing that the utter solitude which he had inflicted upon himself, his refusal to touch food, his stubborn resistance to any and all interrogations put to him and the other queer acts he was guilty of as the time for his execution drew nearer, and at last when his ac-knowlengment of Monday came that he had been feigning insanity all through these longs months I felt thoroughly con-had been feigning insanity all through these longs months I felt thoroughly convinced of the man's insanity.

"But what convinced me most thoroughly of the insanity of the man was my observation of him during my visit today, which lasted fully half an hour. I found that in answering the questions that I put to him in all cases where the answers were of any length he became erratic and rambling in his talk. He could not follow any direct line of thought at all, but would become rambling and broken in his answers and sometimes there was absolutely no meaning in any of his words. For instance I asked him, 'What prompted you to make the confession that you were feigning insanity during all these months?' to which Carr replied, 'I had a warning, a kind of vision, and I thought it was Jesus in my heart that told me to go out of my cell, but when I went out I found it was the devil, and I went down to a well and saw a bucket and said, "Boys, this is the best well water I have ever drunk." I thought the devil was a wise man and I was a fool. I had a bottle and the bottle was full, and the bottle bursted, and then I knew that I was the wise man and the devil was a fool and it's been that way ever since."

Dr. Murray said that he also noticed that when a question was so emphasized as to indicate whether an affirmative or negative reply was wanted the man's mind seemed to follow the stronger one, and he replied

eply was wanted the man's mi

indicate whether an affirmative or negative reply was wanted the man's mind seemed to follow the stronger one, and he replied as the questioner desired. Another indication of an abnormal condition that he noted was that Carr's pulse registered not less at any time during the interview than one hundred and twenty beats to the minute, his eyes were bloodshot and that he could fix them for no length of time upon any object about the room. His attitude was dejected, he moved first from one foot to the other every few moments, and in every way showed the severe nervous strain under which he has been laboring and is now laboring.

"I want to say," said the doctor, "that I used no methods in determining the sanity or insanity of the man that are resorted to by experts in such cases, but made a general observation from the incoherence of his talk and the other indications that I have noted. I think that this present condition of the man is only one of many phases of his insanity that will appear at various intervals and I trust that if the man's sentence is not commuted by the governor he will be given a respite of say three months during which time I thing other and equally amazing phases of his mental and physical condition will assert themselves."

SIMILAR TO CARR'S CASE.

A YOUNG MAN WHO FEIGNED IN-SANITY

ecame So Unmanageable That He Had To Be Chained—He Escaped but Left a Note. Athens, Ga., March 24 - (Special.)-The sudden confession of Alex Carr, the slayer of Captain H. O. King, that he been feigning insanity for quite a long gallows, brings to light a story of real life in Athens just before the war that con stitutes almost an exact parallel.

An old citizen who has resided here for fifty years said today that he had never believed Carr to be insane as he recalled an incident that once happened in Athens before the war. Then he went on to tell his story.

It was just before the war and Mr.

Thomas Crawford was postmaster of Athens. A young man named Palmer Athens. A young man named Palmer came here from the north and set up a daguerreotype gallery. He roomed just above the postoffice.

One sight the postoffice was robbed and fired. The fire didn't do much damage and suspicion pointel to Palmer as the guilty man. His room was searched and in it were found a gold watch and $200 in Palmer at once commenced the role of the lunatic. He was confined in the jail at Watkinsville. He declined to speak to any one, nor would he even look at them. At times he became violent and would shake himself in a way that would indicate his flerce passions.

When the day of his trial came on he was in a violent mood. He was brought in chained and when he sat down in the chair, swayed two and fro, shaking his un-kempt locks. Up to that time he had spoken not a word to any human being.

For some reason his trial was carried into Walton county and he was placed in jail at Monroe. There he kept up his same tactics. Nearly everybody believed he was a raving maniac and only a few were una raving maniac and only a few were ushaken in their belief that he was same. After he had kept up this little game for nearly a year one fine morning his cell was empty and he was gone. He left a note for the sheriff, thanking him for favors shown him and complimenting the since. It is doubtful whether any lunatic asylum ever caught him.

DRAYTON DIVORCE DECREE.

Mrs. Charlotte Augusta is Now a Spring Widow.

Trenton, N. J., March 24.-Charlotte Augusta, wife of J. Coleman Drayton, received her decree of divorce from Chancellor McGill yesterday. The decree was filed in the office of the clerk in chancery and states that it is allowed on the ground of desertion. The opinion accompanying the decree is a rather lengthy one. In it the chancel says that it is impossible to escape the conviction that Mr. Drayton's suspicions of his wife's infidelity were not destitute or his wife's infidelity were not destitute of foundation in questionable circumstances at least, but, the chancellor continues, there is no decision holding that a husband may with impunity be guilty of desertion of his wife here merely because of suspicion of her infidelity. Desertion is never justified except when it is shown by clear and satisfactory proof that he was so offended against as to warrant, at his instance, a decree for divorce of judicial separation.

THE KILLING OF GARRETT.

Hall Has His Commitment Trial. Bound Over.

Rome, Ga., March 24.-(Special.)witness of the trial of young Boo Hall, tue mail carrier, before a justice of the peace at Forney, Ala, for the killing of Sam Garrett, has just arrived in Rome with details of the affair. The evidence develthat Hall had stopped in the road to ops that Hall had stopped in the road to talk with an acquaintance when Garrett and two men drove up in a wagon.

Garrett, who was a desperado over six feet high, was drunk. Hall is a small man, weighing about one hundred and thirty-five pounds, and a reply to some remark made by Garrett made the latter angry. He jumped out of the wagon, began to kick Hall's horse, and when the latter remonstrated he jerked him off the animal together with his saddle and mail bags and flung the latter to one side and began beating Hall in the face. Hall called for help and one of the men in the wagon came and persuaded Garrett to desist, but the latter cursed Hall and remarked, "Wait for me in Forney, and I'll beat you or kill you."

Hall mounted his horse when Garrett made him dismount again, but finally allowed him to proceed and Hall rode on to Forney with his face covered with blood. Remembering Garrett's threats he tried to get a gun, but failed and went to his horse and took out his knife and began mending his stirrip leather and girth which Garrett had broken. Garrett drove up and again began cursing. At last he told Hall he wanted to talk to him and took him to one side. The witnesses heard him say: "Bod, did you think I meant anything sy what I did down the road?"

"Bod, did you think I meant anything sy what I did down the road?"
"Yes," replied Hail. "I think you treated me very bad."
"Yes, aamn you, I'll do you worse than that."
Grabbing him by the collar he dragged him half way across the road when Hail struck him one blow with the knife he had in his hand, which penetrated the heart, killing him in five minutes.

Hall was immediately taken in hand and the greatest excitement prevailed. An immense crowd gathered, and they talked of lynching the young man, but were prevented by the officer. He was held until yesterday, when he was carried before a justice and the trial consumed all day and till I o'clock this evening. Mr. Cordon, a lawyer of Centre, appeared for the state and Colonel McHenry, of Rome, for the defense.

The crowd increased to five hundred peoand Colonel McHenry, of Rome, for the defense.

The crowd increased to five hundred people in and around the county courthouse and the scene was intensely dramatic. Two brothers of the dead man were there and all sorts of threats were made and whisky was plentiful and the crowd was armed.

At last the justice decided to bind Hall over in the sum of $2,500 on a charge of murder in the third degree, equivalent for manslaughter in Georgia.

The sheriff then took him to Centre en account of the menacing attitude of the crowd. Hall's friends are confident of being able to give bond.

Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the court. He said the case before the court was whether or not the amendment of February II, 1893, to the interstate commerce law, sufficiently satisfied the constitutional guaranty of protection. Among other things he said:

"If, as was justly observed in the opinion of the court below, witnesses standing in Brown's position were at liberty to set up an immunity from testifying the enforcement of the interstate commerce law or other analogous acts, wherein it is for the interest of both parties to conceal their misdoings, would become impossible, since it is only from the mouths of those having knowledge of the inhibited contracts that the facts can be ascertained. MADE BY HER COUNSEL

From the Decision of Judge Speer-Attorney General Terrell To Make the Motion-Macon News.

Macon, Ga., March 24 .- (Special.) - Today letter was received at the office of the clerk of the United States court at Macon from State Attorney General Terrell, asking that a copy of the demurrer and answer in the case of Mrs. Nobles, and also a copy of Judge Speer's order be sent to him, as he desires to submit a motion to the United States supreme court to advance the case and the attorney general says he will need these papers in the preparation of the motion. It will be remembered that Mrs. Nobles's attorneys, Mr. Marion Harris, of Macon, and Hon. W. C. Glenn, of Atlanta, applied to Judge Speer for a writ of habeas corpus, the ground of this petition being that Mrs. Nobles was about to be executed without receiving the benefit of all the laws, that she was insane, etc. Judge Speer decided that as the petition alleged that Mrs. Nobles was insane at the time of the trial before the state courts he had no jurisdiction, as the United States court was not a court of review. He intimated that if the petition had alleged that Mrs. Nobles had become insane since the trial and was about to be executed without having the question locked into, he might give a different opinion. Mrs. Nobles's attorneys gave notice they would appeal from Judge Speer's decision to the United States supreme court. Judge Speer then issued an order that Mrs. Nobles would remain a United States prisoner until the case was United States prisoner until the case was decided. In the ordinary course Mrs. Nobles's case would not reach the supreme court for quite a long time, perhaps two years, but if the court grants the motion of Attorney General Terrell to advance the case, it may be heard within the present year. In the meanwhile Mrs. Nobles and Gus Fambles are locked up in the Macon jail. It is not probable that anything will be done with Fambles until Mrs. Nobles's case is disposed of. It is probable that the motion to advance will be presented to the court on the first or second Monday in April. As the court will adjourn early in May it is not probable that the case will be reached before October or November next, as the court will not reassemble until October.

The headquarters of the Georgia Loan and Trust Company will be removed from Americus to Macon on May 1st. General Manager O. A. Coleman is now in Macon Manager O. A. Coleman is now in Macon making arrangements for the removal, and has made a lease of five offices. The removal will bring to Macon several families and cause the disbursement of quite a sum in salaries, rents, etc. The Georgia Loan and Trust Company is the largest concern of the kind in the state. Mr. W. W. Shipp is secretary. Anderson & Anderson, of Macon, are the attorneys.

A Consolidation. Consolidation and retrenchment seems to be the ruling principle with the Standard Oil Company now, at least, so far as Georgia is concerned, and it may apply also to the entire country. Agent B. F. Stone, of the Standard at Macon, has been instructed to abolish his entire clerical force structed to aboush his entire cierical force here as soon as the March work is completed, which will be about the middle of April. It is thought that only a warehouse will be retained at Macon. Agent Stone has also been instructed to make his reports in the future to Cincinnati instead of to Louisville. It is reported that the officers of the Standard throughout the state may be consolidated into one general office at Atlanta.

He Is Ill. Information has been received in Macon of the serious illness of Mr. A. D. Skellie, of Fort Valley, recently nominated for mayor of that place. Appendicitis is the trouble. He is one of the leading citizens of Houston county. He is a brother of Mr. T. O. Skellie, of Macon, and an uncle of Mrs. C. D. Hurt, of Macon.

URDER TRIAL AT COVINGTON.

It has been claimed that the cause of the difficulty, which occurred last spring, was the running of a line which separated the arm of Stewart from that of McDaniel

Both Sanders McDaniel and his father, Mr. Henry McDaniel, were implicated in this most unfortunate affair. The case came up before the late Judge Richard H. Clark at the September term of the superior court of this county, but owing to the illness of the elder McDaniel it was postponed, and both men were placed under bond. Mr. Sanders McDaniel's bond was fixed at $2,000, and his father's at $2,000

"Have you ever heard of Queen Victoria's Becret?"

It was a well-known New York physician who recently asked the following question in the course of a conversation at his olub. None of the company had ever heard about it, and they pressed him for an explantation. He then related the following remarkable story:

"It is a well-known fact," he said, "that the queen of Great Britain is one of the most wonderful old ladies in existence. Although she is nearly eighty years of age, she is, today, as bright and active as many a woman of forty. And why do you suppose it is? I will tell you, for I obtained the information from reliable gources. It is because her majesty never allows a day to pass by without taking a little pure malt whiskey. She takes this strengthening stimulant by the advice of her physicians, among whom are some of the greatest medical men in the world. That is why the queen is so full of life and energy in spite of her advanced years."

This is an interesting story and it clearly proves that scientific men are correct in telling us that nothing compares with a pure malt stimulant for building up health. Unfortunately such a stimulant is by no means common or more people would reap the benefit of taking such a prepara-

The jeweler told him it was a diamond and was worth between $300 and $400. The railroads have given a rate of one and one-third fare for the round trip.

Montgomery's present city council is disposed to be up-to-date in all matters of improvement.

A Little Georgia Burglar. A negro boy named Henry Fagan, aged about twelve years, and who says his home is in Americus, Ga., hid himself in the New York store Saturday night when the store was closed, and along about morning New York store Saturday night when the store was closed, and along about morning he proceeded to help himself to such articles of clothing as struck his fancy. He needed a little cash and he touched the cash drawer for the change left in it the night before, securing about $5, mostly in coppers. Henry then lee himself out and went to the corner about 5 o'clock in the morning, where he took a hack and went to the place at which he was staying. The robbery was discovered about 9 o'clock Sunday morning and reported to the authorities, who at once began a search for the thief. They learned of the hack incident and the hackman was found, who carried them to the house where Henry stopped, and there they found the stolen clothing and the greater portion of the missing money. A sharp lookout was kept for Henry and he was caught about 2 o'clock this morning. He admits the burglary of the New York store but says that this was the only job he did in this city, though he robbed several stores in Americus. He has been bound over to await the action of the grand jury.

A report comes from Luvere, Ala., that the Plant system proposes at an early date to construct a railroad from that date to construct a railroad from that place through the counties of Coffee, Geneva and Henry to a junction with its present line in Henry county, near the Chattahoochee river. The Plant system now has a branch which terminates at Luvere, but the Luvere people think that when this extension is made the new road will become the main line. If the Plant system builds their reported road it will parallel its old line for a distance of about seventy-five miles.

Large Order for Cars. Anniston, Aia., March 24.—(Special.)—The United States Car Company, of this city, has received an order from the Wheeling and Lake Erie Railway Company for 560 gondola freight cars, work upon which will begin at once. The big plant here, which was idle for several years, has been which was idle for several years, has been in partial operation for a few months and this order will cause every department to be worked to its full capacity, giving employment to 1,000 or 1,200 men. The fact that the United States Car Company successfully competed for the order from a northern railroad, where the point of delivery is so far distant and must be reached at considerable expense, leads to the confident belief that under the company's new management sufficient orders will be scured—as cars are needed by southern roads, where the cost of delivery will be so much less—to keep the immense works in full and continuous operation henceforth. In fact, the company's officials believe that business in a short time will cause the starting up of the shops at New Decatur, which are owned by the company and which have been idle for several years.

Secretary Smith's Mission to Georgia. Now that Secretary Smith is coming into Georgia in his official capacity as a member of the Cleveland cabinet, advocating the single gold standard and urging the democratic voters of this state to east aside their party principles and substitute for them republican financial doctrines, it is well to recur to the principles which Mr. Smith sought to maintain when he was simply a Georgia democrat and before he became a member of the Cleveland cabinet.

In another column, therefore, we reprint the letter which Mr. Smith wrote to Colonel W. L. Peek, in September. 1890, setting forth his views on the financial question. The letter was drawn out in the most natural way. The Farmers' Alliance had become a power in the state, and it was thought by many good men that the harmony of the democratic party was threatened; it was thought, in fact, that the party would be practically destroyed in Georgia if the members of the alliance were induced to withdraw support from its candidates and nominate candidates of their own.

Under these circumstances Mr. Smith's letter to Colonel W. L. Peek was written. We have printed this document before, but we re-print it now in order to show what Mr. Smith's position was when he thought it desirable to harmonize the conflicting elements in Georgia. It will be observed from his letter that he was opposed to the contraction of the currency, and, for that reason alone, was opposed to the subtreasury plan. He thought that plan would result in a yearly contraction of the currency "even more injurious to the masses than the present system." Nevertheless, while he was opposed to the subtreasury plan on this account he was in favor of "a number of measures might gather." He was even in favor of a "currency with non-perishable agricultural products as a basis." He was He was in favor of the substitution of a legal tender currency for the interestbearing bonds.

All this was before Mr. Smith became Secretary Smith, and while he was yet in favor of democratic harmony on demoeratic lines. He is now preparing to return to Georgia to make a campaign in favor of democratic harmony on republican lines.

He is now preparing to return to Georgia to make a campaign in favor of democratic harmony on republican lines. He is in favor of the single gold standard, and, consequently, is opposed to the remonetization of silver. He is in favor of every form of currency contraction in order to maintain the single gold standard. He is in favor of contracting the currency by issuing government bonds in time of peace. He is in favor of piling up the public debt and increasing the burdens of the taxpayers. He is in favor or retiring and canceling all our legal tender paper notes.

He is in favor of taking away from the government the power to issue paper currency and of placing that power in the hands of the banking corporations.

He is in favor, in short, of every financial scheme that John Sherman and the leading republicans have suggested during the past quarter of a century. And he is coming to Georgia, with a presidential comission in his pocket, to say that these republican schemes are all democratic and to urge the democratic voters of this state to cast their political skins as he has cast his, and to urge them to indorse the republican system of finance that robs the producers of cotton of half the value of their staple.

This is Secretary Smith's mission to Georgia.

She's a Royal Samson.

The newspapers of the country are very much exercised over the feats of igth ascribed to Maria Theresa, the archduchess of Austria, and the next heir to the throne. In muscular exercises the hess has acquired a reputation which has made her the marvel of all The statement is made by everal European newspapers that she a able to raise a full-grown man from be ground by one hand and to hold him aloft at the full length of her extended

A contemporary newspaper, in discuss ing the achievements of this royal Sam son, goes on to say: The archduchess once rode horseback from Reichenau to Guns and back, a disance of considerably more than 100 miles, without stopping. A court dignitary ven-tured to remonstrate with the emperor bout the matter, urging that the arch duchess was by such imprudences endangering not only her health but also the succession to the crown. "Ah, it is easy accession to the crown. "Ah, it is easy see that you are not a married man," was the reply of his apostolic malesty. The archduchess is a bold, mountaineer and unaided by professional guides sh as made some exceedingly difficult ascents in Austria and Switzerland. She paints beautifully, too, sculptures well, writes beautifully, too, sculptures well, writes cleverly and is singularly well fitted men-tally and physically to become the empress f a sport-loving people.

If these statements are true the Amercan woman, so far as brute force is concerned, would have but a slim chance in a pugilistic contest with this muscular exponent of royalty.

No Dodge This Year!

The latest scheme of those who favor the single gold standard and poverty prices is to convince the democrats of Georgia that they ought to smother their democratic sentiments when they meet n state convention and make a veritable dumb show of the whole business.

For instance, Secretary Smith's personal "organ" copies the following from The Thomasville Times-Advertiser, which is in favor of dear money and poverty prices for the people:

In view of the fact that Georgia democrats will not have an opportunity to inderse the national platform after it is pro-mulgated, one resolution, and only one, should be passed by the state convention, which meets in Macon on the 25th of June;

Resolved, That the democratic party of Georgia pledges its loyal support to the of the national democratic ention, which convenes in Chicago on the Just this and nothing more

This is a very complete prescription to bring the democratic party of Georgia into contempt at home and abroad, but it doesn't go far enough for Sec retary Smith's organ, which says:

This resolution is good as far as it goes, but to make it complete the indo should extend also in most explicit terms platform of the democratic party. There should be no room for doubt concerning the position of the Georgia democ racy in the national campaign.

It may very safely be said that the democratic party of Georgia will not perform the feat of bringing itself into contempt in its own state and elsewhere. It will do now, as it has always done heretofore-it will enunciate a platform of democratic principles-genuine democratic principles-so that the democrats of other states and the national convention itself will have no room to doubt where the democrats of Georgia stand.

Any other course would be a sneaking and contemptible evasion of the vital issues now before the people.

Since suggestions seem to be in order The Constitution offers the following as a broad and satisfactory declaration of the democratic party of Georgia on the financial question:

"Resolved, That the democrats of Georgia, in convention assembled, do hereby recommend to the national convention of the party the adoption of such a declaration on the currency questhe minds of the people that the democratic party may be depended upon to restore our currency and coinage laws to the conditions existing prior to 1873."

Freedom of Speech in the South. A recent issue of The Birmingham State-Herald contains the following remarkable statement:

In another column we publish a telegram rom Mr. S. A. Sparkman, postmaster at Decatur, stating that he had received a letter from D. W. McIver, staff corre-spondent of The Montgomery Advertiser, nforming him that the fact of the former to The State Herald defending his vertiser, had been called to the attention of the postoffice department at Washington McIver's purpose was undoubtedly to in-timidate Mr. Sparkman from exposing false charges against the honest and law-abidng citizens of Morgan county. An hones man is never afraid of threats, as Mr.

Instead of cowing, as McIver expected and holding his tongue in order to hold his office, while his neighbors were ma-ligned, he telegraphs the facts to "this paper, showing up McIver in his true light, Let it be understood now that the free white people of Alabama can no more be buildozed than they can be bought. Thank the Lord there are democratic federal office holders, too, who are not going to crawl on their bellies and lick the dust simply because they hold a federal governnent position.

If three years ago the democrats of the south had been told that such an occurrence as that related above could have come to pass under even a pretended democratic administration, they would have felt like ducking their informant in the nearest mill pond as a cheap and an easy method of punishing a slanderer.

But there is the incident vouched for by Mr. Sparkman, postmaster at Decatur, Ala. The Montgomery Advertiser is owned by the postmaster at Montgomery, consequently the staff correspondent feels as if he were in the pay of the postmaster. When the postmaster at Decatur undertakes to go into print to defend his neighbors from the slanders of The Montgomery Advertiser, the staff correspondent is governor, the public was not prepared prompt to inform him that his crime has been called to the attention of the postffice department.

We do not know whether Mr. Sparkman is to be drawn and quartered for the crime of defending his neighbors from the attacks of the postmaster organ at Montgomery, or whether he is to be simply beheaded under the auspices of the federal government. Whatever his fate, the episode must be regarded as in every way a remarkable one. It seems to be understood by the postmaster organs and the cuckoos generally that a man who has accepted a federal office is not even free to defend his neighbors if his defense runs counter to anything that has been said by the postmaster organs and cuckoos. onsequently, when the postmaster a Decatur, Ala., so far forgets his allegiance to the patronage power and to ostmaster organs as to defend his people from attacks that have been made on them in the aforesaid organs, he is promptly notified that the attention of he postoffice department has been called to his actions. Fortunately, Mr. Sparkman has not forgotten the fact that he did not surrender freedom of speech and other rights of citizenship in order to accept etty federal office, and he very plainlets the postmaster organ and its cor spondent understand that he is not to be bulldozed or intimidated by threats of federal interference now any mor than the unterrified democrats of the south were in the days of reconstruc-

We have said that the democrats of the south would not have believed such an episode possible three years ago; but since Charles S. Hamlin, the assistant ecretary of the United States treasury, has set up a campaign bureau in Washington, right under the nose of the president, for the purpose of assisting Wall street and the money power in fastening the single gold standard on the people, honest democrats need not be surprised at any development.

Moonshining on the Increase Georgia.

One of the most significant facts dis closed by the docket of the federal court for the northern district of Georgia is the steadily increasing number of moonshine cases that are brought from term to term.

More than half of all the issues tha are tried before Judge Newman, on the criminal side of the court, are based upon alleged violations of the internal revenue laws. The whitecap is only a more head-strong and rebellious edition of the moonshiner, having been evolved in recent years as the result of aggravated circumstances. Commissioner Broyles is chiefly employed in hearing moonshine cases by way of preliminary in vestigation. The federal grand jury is occupied nearly five days in each week returning true bills against moonshiners and the docket of the court is continually overflowing with this species of litigation.

What is the cause of this condition of steady increase in the business of this illicit industry there must be some explanation. The fault is not in the machinery of justice, so far as the vigorous prosecution of the moonshiners is concerned, for a fearless application of the law to each individual case by Judge Newman serves as a measure of prohibition. Serving under the federal statutes which provide for the punishment of violators, the officers of the court are conscientious and thorough in discharging the duties arising under those statutes. The fault is not in execution of the law, nor in the law itself: but in a cause that is still deeper and more fundamental in its origin. Poverty is the moving cause that has driven the moonshiners of north Georgia into the whisky business. This is demonstrated by the character of the defendants who are cited to appear before Judge Newman at each term of the court. Almost without exception these noonshiners are seedy-looking specimens of hard times. The most prosperous farmer is independent of this artificial method of extracting a living from the ground, but the less fortunate tiller of the soil, whose little patch of ground on a barren hillside yields only a meagre supply of corn and no cotton, finds it necessary to convert the crop into whisky for the purpose of realizing a profit on his labor. Without the revenne arising from this forbidden service some of them would scarcely be able to make a living. The remedy for this evil. therefore, is better times and a larger supply of the circulating medium. A better market for agricultural products and a higher premium on the labor of the industrious farmer will serve to bring about a healthy change and to relegate the moonshiner to the rear. Prosperity will ring the death knell of

Is a Precedent Established?

So many strange things happen in Atlanta during the course of a single year that such a thing as a genuine surprise rarely ever disturbs the public mind. This composure, however, sustains a severe shock in the announce ment of Alex Carr's confession to playing a borrowed part and that instead of being a speechless lunatic, as was generally supposed, this exhibition of insanity was only a marvelous piece of acting. Though prepared, as a usual thing for strange occurrences and unexpected happenings, this confession on the part of Alex Carr has taken the public wholly by surprise, and no sooner was the statement made than thousands of eyebrows esponded to the sudden revelation.

After having been a prisoner in Fulton county jail for nearly two years, the greater portion of that time maintaining a profound silence which induced the jail officials to believe that he had lost the power of speech; after having been examined by the best medical experts of the state, who brought the rays of scientific scrutiny to bear upon the case; after bending his form from a stout and vigorous perpendicular to the nervous stoop of a paralytic old manafter all these things, and just before the time set for a final hearing before the to hear the announcement that Carr had suddenly regained the use of his tongue, that he had strangely resumed his upright stature, and that, in the full possession of all his mental faculties, he had made the statement that he was tired of shamming and was ready to meet his fate like a man.

If a miracle had been performed at the jail the surprise could not have been more genuine or profound. The chief significance of the whole matter was that not only the best physicians of Atanta and the state who had made a careful investigation of Carr's case, but the entire community as well, had been deceived.

lows the wake of this sensational confession the question arises, does not this ception on the part of Alex Carr establish a precedent which will be here after fatal to the plea of insanity as a dodge for escaping the gallows? The character of the confession gives to the prisoner a dignified prominence beyond the measure of the charges brought against him. Murder is a crime that is frequently committed, and there is noth ing about the crime of ordinary murder that makes it a matter of national inter est. This confession, however, under the peculiar circumstances connected with the case, gives to the prisoner national importance and establishes precedent which will be cited in every court of justice from Maine to California. It may result in the final re tirement of the familiar plea of insanity which has been the resort of countless prisoners and the salvation of most of them

So far as Atlanta is concerned the plea of insanity is ready for a tombstone for a long time.

A Notable Visit. The visit to Atlanta of the Augustin Daly company, headed by that charming and most talented American actress Miss Ada Rehan, is an event of considerably more than ordinary importance in the theatrical history of the season.

Mr. Daly has won his place at the head of American managers by his honest, sincere and successful efforts to give to the stage that which is, beyond all cavil, the best. His career has been a remarkable one. For more than a quarter of a century he has been engaged, as dramatist and as producing manager, in giving to the American stage what may rightfully be termed its most notable productions. The revivals of Shakespearean comedies, done at Daly's theater in New York, have been undoubtedly the most complete presentations of these works of the great master that the English-speaking stagewhich means in this case the stage of the world-has known. Mr. Daly's companies are always excellent, but when we speak of them the thought of Miss Ada Rehan almost overshadows all the rest. This woman's grace and beauty and her prominent talents have been very strong factors in winning the success which has come to the Daly house hold. It is a matter of national pride things in north Georgia? For such a that Miss Rehan has met with as great success in London, the center of Englishspeaking art, as in this country, and that she has deserved that success is unques tioned.

The southern tour of this company is due to the enterprise of Messrs. C. B. Jefferson, Klaw & Erlanger, a manage rial firm which has strong interests in, and has done a great deal for, the south the present tour being made under the direction of these gentlemen. The visit of the Daly company is another evidence of the fact that Atlanta is recognized as one of the most important cities of America, and as such receives and will continue to receive the highest class of attractions. And the people are the gainers.

The secretary's organ wants the democratic party in Georgia to wear a gag, a muzzle and blinders. The idea is that the democrats of the state are too dangerous a lot to be permitted to say what they believe.

It seems that as the hot weather approaches the goldolators want Georgia democrats to wear muzzles.

The secretary's organ has arranged the basis of "harmony." It is for Georgia democrats to shed their principles and adopt the views of eastern republicans. This would be a great victory for the banks and the bondholders.

If the democratic party of Georgia will just keep its mouth shut on the financial issue it will be a great help to the big banks and the bondholders.

"While her batteries are not more formidable than those of the Indiana, she will be able to go into action in the heaviest seas and to take the ocean in search of the enemy, rather than remain in harbor waiting for attack. She will also be one of the fleetest vessels of her class in the world, and altogether she is by long odds the most important addition yet made to our navy. The tidl which the house committee is now ready to report makes an appropriation for four more battleships, together with a number of torpedo boats. If the expansion of the navy continues we will in time have a fieet of the most modern vessels, which will not only be a source of national pride, but will also be our surest guarantee against attack by foreign nations, provided, of course, that we can keep our jingoes from declaring war until the new ships have a more substantial existence than the plans in the bureau of construction."

The religious people of New York are very much concerned about a legislative bill which may have the effect of excluding bill which may have the effect of excluding wine from the communion table in New York state. Dr. Quenneil, the rector of Christ Episcopal church, has brought the attention of District Attorney Perkins to the matter. In the opinion of the latter ministers who use wine in celebrating the communion service will be lable to prosecution. The bill goes before Governor Morton this week for his official signature. The New York Morning Advertiser makes the following observation:

"Dr. Quennell says that the wines used for communion are within the term liquor,"

"Dr. Quennell says that the wines used for communion are within the term 'liquor,' and by the provision of the Raines bill may neither be sold nor given away by any association or any person on Bunday. A church is clearly an association within the meaning of the Raines bill. The prohibition will apply equally on week days to persons under eighteen years of age and places within 200 feet of a church, which includes, of course, the church itself."

The proper soil will have a sandy or gravelly bottom, and the location, it one may have a choice, will be with an eastern or southern exposure. In the selection of seeds, Miss Cutler said, look first to quality, and pay the price if it is anyway reasonable. REFORE AND AFTER.

What the Secretary of the Interior Thought About Currency in 1890. The following letter, written by Hon. Hoke Smith, proprietor of The Evening plains itself. It is taken from the files of Smith's own paper. As will be seen, the etter was written on the 15th of Septem-

The Letter.

Atlanta, Ga., September 15, 1890.-Hon. W. L. Peek-My Dear Sir: In The Atlanta Constitution of yesterday you are credited with having used in your Conyers speech the following language:

"Some of General Gordon's friends, Mr. Hoke Smith and others, went to Colonel Livingston and other alliancemen, saying to them that Governor Gordon would support the subtreasury bill if certain conditions were agreed to.

"Colonel Livingston answered promptly that he was sure that the alliance would agree to these conditions, knowing that the alliancemen deplored more than any one agreeing to the terms proposed.

"Colonel Smith and these other friends e would accept the agreement.

This statement, so far as it relates to my-self, is at variance with the facts, and can best correct it by giving you what did occur so far as it is applicable.

I wished to talk with Colonel Livingston about the importance of perfect harmony among democrats in Georgia, and he called at my request. I began by urging the necessity for preventing antagonisms from growing up among democrats.

I called his attention to the rumor that the alliance nominees for congress would not abide by the action of the democratic caucus in Washington, and to the imp nel Livingston expressed no doubt about the fact that alliancemen from Georgia would act in Washington with the dem cratic organization, and our conversation then changed to the subtreasury.

I urged that it was unwise for alliance men to make an indorsement of this meas ure a prerequisite to their support of demo crats for office. I called his attention to the fact that there were many democrati inside and outside the alliance who wer financial system, and who were thoroughly in accord with the effort to increase approve the subtreasury bill. If the subreasury men fought this branch of money defense, be forced into a fight against the subtreasury men, and thus those voters who were natural allies would be divided so that nothing could be accomplished. I stated to Colonel Livingston that there were many like myself, who could not say they were for the subtreasury bill or something better, for this indicated that it was ury bill as it stood. I urged that many believed the provision of the bill which required products to be sold by the govern nent, and the money received for the sam canceled at the end of twelve months un at the instance of the depositors, necess tated a yearly contraction of the currence dependent in no sense upon the needs of the public for money, and that I considered this forced yearly contraction even mor

Colonel Livingst expressed himself very favorable to the proposed editorial, and stated his purpose to approve it in The Southern Alliance Farmer. He also said that if General Gor-don was upon that line, all fight against him inside of the alliance would stop. I eplied that I had no doubt General Gor This was the substance of the conversa tion. There was no agreement or attempted agreement between us as to the senatorial question. I, in no sense, represented General Gordon in the conference, and I certainly did not undertake to piedge General Gordon upon the subject. I did not even repeat the conversation to him. although I then believed, and now believe, that the construction which I placed upon General Gordon's position was correct,

I write thus fully to you on account of my absolute confidence in your sincerity, and because my conference with Colonel Livingston was induced by a desire to aid in preventing the bitterness which seemed about to spring up among democrats in

My only purpose was, in a spirit of har-mony, to aid democratic nominees and pre-serve democratic organization, and pass by united effort measures of practical fit to the people.

To present just what took place, so far as I was concerned, and as a substitute for the contemplated editorial, unless you see me reason to the contrary, I shall pub lish this letter. Very truly your friend, HOKE SMITH. Colonel Peek being out of Atlanta and in Savannah, I publish this letter at once.

He rather looked upon the Cuban matter as finally disposed of, and said that it would probably now be left where with the president. This course would, Mr. Hale added, subserve the public good. The Senoia Enterprise sums up the financial question and the financial discussion in a way which shows that the people are not going to be fooled by any efforts of the gold standard people to make a platform for their opponents to run on and that they are not going to be fooled by any of the straddle statesmen, of whom we have had some in the past. The Enterprise declares the situation to be this: "There is no middle ground to take on

There is no middle ground to take on the money question; none can be taken and liberty be retained. It is either gold and silver both as money, or the gold standard. Gold standard means the en-slavement of the farmer and laborer to the gold power; double standard means freedom; choose ye this day which you want." The Jonesboro Enterprise gives this bit of advice to the kickers who are trying to defeat the will of the people by objecting to the primary action as suggested by the state committee: "Party harmony will be best conserved by the county committees gracefully ac-cepting this action of the state committee and faithfully carrying out its provisions." And they are doing it. Fulton, Floyd, Wilkinson, Jackson—the list grows as rapidly as the county committees act.

The state papers are full of comment upon the candidacy of Judge Crisp and upon his proposition to submit to the people the question of their choice in the senatorship contest. Here are a few samples of the editorial expression:

Athens Banner: We do not believe we are mistaken when we say that the next legislature will be dominated by sentiment favorable to the free coinage of silver. But Mr. Crisp's strength is not confined to the ranks of the silver contingent. He draws strength from all factions, and is by long odds the strongest man in public life to-day in Georgia. There is every reason to dictate his choice as the next senator, and even the great financial question will, for the time being, take a back seat, while all Georgia unites in naming Crisp as the suc-cessor of John B. Charles Close Was Granted an Injunction Against D. E. Simmons.

MRS. HURT LOSES HER CASE

She Sued the City for Damages as Result of the Construction of the New Forsyth Street Bridge.

A petition for injunction was filed yester day with Judge Lumpkin by the attorneys of Charles Close, asking that D. E. Simmons be enjoined from selling a piece of property which was conveyed to him by

It is charged by the plaintiff that he is the owner of a piece of property in the city on which a loan was desired. He made several applications to different parties for the loan, but failing to get the amount he wished, he applied to Simmons, who informed him that he thought he could get the loan from a personal friend, provided the title to the property could be made in his name for the time being. Close alleges that he made over the piece of property to Simmons with the un-derstanding that it was to be reconveyed as soon as the loan was secured and the amount of the loan was also to be returned to him. Close now claims that Simmons has refused to return the property to him, thought frequent demands hav been made for it. The petition claims that Simmons has recently been advertising the property for sale and Close desired a restraining order enjoining Simmons from selling the property. It is also asked in the petition that Simmons be required to return the property by giving a deed and that if he has collected any of the money which he claimed to have borrowed, it also be returned.

Judge Lumpkin, after reading the petiion, granted a temporary restraining order and has set the case for a hearing as soon as it can be reached.

A Verdict for the City. In the case which Mrs. Joel Hurt filed against the city for damages as a result of the building of the Forsyth street bridge, the jury returned a verdict yesterday afternoon in favor of the city. The case has been on trial in the first division of the city court for several days and has been watched with interest by all concerned in the proceedings. Mrs. Hurt claimed that she had received damages to her property in the sum of $15,000 and thought the city should reimburse her n that amount a store which ran from Broad street through to Forsyth street and that the bridge had been built in such a manner as to entirely cut off the approach from the Forsyth street entrance. The bridge is several feet above the floor in the second story and too low for the floor in the third story.

On account of the construction of the

On account of the construction of the bridge she claimed her tenants had moved out and she had lost the rent of the property since that time.

Many witnesses were introduced by the city, who swore that the property had been greatly enhanced in value instead of damaged. The case was conducted by Attorneys Palmer & Reid, representing the plaintiff, and the city was represented by City Attorney Anderson and Assistant Attorney Westmoreland.

Indicted by the Grand Jury.

A true blil has been returned by the grand jury against Mrs. Owens, charging her with an attempt to kill Jake Adolphus, the young white man who was shot by her while he was in her room.

Mrs. Owens claims that the shooting was on account of an insult and that she shot to kill. Adolphus was carried to the Grady hospital, where he was found to be dangerously wounded and for a while his life was despaired of. It was thought for some time that Mrs. Owens would be arrested for murder, but Adolphus recovered and the charge was made of an assault with intent to kill.

On account of the condition of Mrs. Owens she was not arrested. She is now the mother of a very young infant and for the present she will not be placed in jail. She is quite poor and has no money with which to furnish bond in case she were to be arrested. Indicted by the Grand Jury.

CUSTER'S LAST FIGHT.

Illustrated Lecture by Captain Bowen After Easter.

One of the best things of the season will be the illustrated lecture, "Custer's Last Fight," to be given by Captain W. H. C. Bowen, United States army, at the Lyceum, soon after Easter. Captain Bowen has made a study of his subject and has been made a study of his subject and has been busy for years collecting material, maps and pictures. He now has somewhere in the neighborhood of 117 slides for the stereopticon, all of which are used to illustrate his theme. These are all authentic, and the maps are official. Never has this subject been so clearly and forcibly presented as in this lecture. ed as in this lecture. Last Monday night the five hundred who heard Captain Bowen at the mess hall at the barracks testified their appreciation by continued and hearty applause and surprise was expressed at the number and class of illustrations shown. One officer said, "I heard Lieutenant — give a lecture at West Point on this same subject, but it couldn't hold a candle to yours." Every one in Atlanta and vicinity should hear and see for themselves.

ADA REHAN AT THE GRAND

The engagement of the Augustin Daly company was given a fitting introduction last night in the splendid audience which filled the Grand theater. It was one of the notable audiences of the season-just such a one as might be expected on the occasion of the visit of one of America's foremost comediennes coming at the head of the most famous of the stock companies of New York: and that the entertainment that was furnished was the most enjoyabl was attested by the many evidences of en-

The play chosen for the opening was "The Last Word," a comedy adapted by Mr. Daly from the German. It was an in-teresting and a funny play and it was es-pecially enjoyable in that it furnished such splendid opportunities to display the versatility of the brilliant star. The play is entirely devoid of all of the theatricalisms which are considered necessary by so many playwrights-the heavy villains and addenda of that ilk. The scene is laid in Washington. The central figure is Baroness Vera, a Russian. The story told is of a stern father whose sense of duty to his country, to the social world and to his own convictions and prejudices, outweigh for a time all domestic and filial considerations, and in consequence he causes a great dea of misery to his daughter by attempting to force her into a matrimonial alliance which is revolting to her, principally because she is deeply in love with another.

The favored lover is the brother of the baroness, and the detested suitor is a Russian baron connected with the Russian lega tion at Washington. The fascinating witch ery and fervid eloquence of the baroness completely soften and win over the stern self-contained and seemingly flinty-hearted father (the secretary) and the curtain falls upon a satisfying scene of domestic love and harmony in which everybody is made

Miss Rehan is of course the counters, who has had a rather indifferent English education and has not entirely succeeded in mastering the English pronunciation She is a woman of high birth, of distinguished appearance and of keen wit and subtle intellect, and with a heart warm with true honesty. It might well be said of Miss Rehan in this role that she nor trays and does not simply act herself as so many of our latter-day stars do. The highly intelligent gentleman who, in departing from the opera house last night, de-clared that Miss Rehan was charming, but it was unfortunate she had that ac cent, paid her higher compliment than he knew. She made the countess a very live and very charming personage—the bril-liant, vivacious woman of the world and yet terribly in earnest when the occasion demanded. Her comedy touches showed true art; and that bit in the third act where she tells the story of her little brother and starts each individual tear duct in the audience to flowing showed the intenher dramatic power. She is the very essence of daintiness and grace at all times and her Countess Vera is a splendid piece of acting.

Miss Rehan's costumes were notably handsome. The production was notable for the Augustin Daly nicety of handling, the perfection of art in its every phase. In scenic features—in every detail—was the production a perfect one. Of the supporting company, of course Mr. James Lewis comes first. He is one of the rare comedians of the American stage and over him age seems to have no control. His part in "The Last Word" is that of a youthful dude and it is not only handled in a highly artistic manner, but it is made an extreme ly funny character.

Mr. George Clarke as the secretary was true to life, glving a manly, dignified picture of the man of public life, and portraying the emotional side of his role with

Mr. Charles Richman was in the nature of revelation. He combines ability with a handsome presence, and that is a rare combination in the young men of the stage these days. Richman is a man who gives splendid promise of reaching the heights. Mr. Edwin Varrey is an excellent actor of old men's parts and is seen to good advantage as the old professor. Mr. Herbert is sufficiently strong as the boy who is the cause of all the trouble. Mr. Bridgland was an excellent bit as Mossop. Miss Carliste and Miss Nelson, as the daughters, are clever and the smaller parts are all in good hands. In fact the company is a magnificent one in every respect "Taming of the Shrew" Tonight. The Daly company will be in Atlanta for one more performance. There is no matinee but the engagement will conclude with the production of "Taming of the Shrew" tonight. It is in these production of the Shakespearean comedies that Mr. Daly has won his most notable fame and in the roles of Shakespeare's charming women that Miss Rehan has attained her highest success. Katherine is one of her most attractive roles and the opportunity to see her in this play is certainly one which will be appreciated. The advance sale indicates an even larger audience tonight and this is probably due to the desire to see Miss

Rehan in such a familiar role. "Charley's Aunt" Coming. "Charley's Aunt," which has been aptly styled "the comedy sensation of the decade" and which will be seen in this city again on March 27th and 28th, Friday and Saturday nights, with matinee Saturday, has had one of the most successful runs ever known. The audiences at the various theaters where the piece had been played were so large that the musicians were obliged to play under the stage at every performance. The piece is mirth-provoking from the be-

The piece is mirth-provoking from the beginning to end. The fun is of the most rollicking description, but never at any moment borders on vulgarity.

In fact, one of the chief charms of the comedy is that while it never clases to amuse, it never descends to anything in dialogue or situation that would shock the most fastidious.

MRS. BLACK'S LOSS.

Some One Drove Her Carriage Away and Lost Some Valuable Papers. Mrs. Nellie Peters Black met with a loss yesterday that may deprive her for a time of some valuable papers connected with the kindergarten association, of this city, of which she is president. She had been driving about the city and had left her horse and buggy in front of St. Philip's church, in which she went to attend the afternoon service. On the seat of the buggy she had left some valuable papers relating to her work for the kindergarten, and a pair of glasses.

When she emerged from the house of worship her horse and buggy were nowhere worship her horse and buggy were nowhere to be seen. The loss was immediately reported to Chief Connolly, who immediately instituted a search for the missing team, which was found later in the afternoon, on Peachtree street. The papers and glasses, however, had disappeared, much to the dissatisfaction of the owner, and it is to be hoped that they will be returned, if found, as they can be of no service to the finder and will greatly aid Mrs. Black in her noble work among the children of Atlanta. It is thought that the team was started by some boy in a spirit of mischievousness.

FIRMNESS IN THE FORENOON

The Range of Cotton Was Within Narrow Limits-Sterling Exchange Advanced-Stocks Declined.

New York. 'March 24.-Stocks were depressed until late in the day, lower quota-tions from the London market, the advance in sterling exchange and the selling of about 8,000 shares of St. Paul and Louis-ville and Nashville for foreign account having encouraged the local bears. The advance in sterling exchange appeared age the latter, and they added to their outstanding lines. There was some talk about gold shipments in the near future, and this, with the revival of the rumors about a down town bank being in trouble, materially assisted those operating for lower prices. A good deal was heard again about the unsatisfactory conditions of trade, but certain officials of financial institutions in the neighborhood of Wall street were of opinion that this feature of nercial situation had been exaggerated for effect. The reported embar-rassment of a bank could not be confirmed. The early loss in prices ranged from ½ to 2 The early loss in prices range from 2 to 2 per cent was well distributed, the Industrials, the Grangers, Louisville and Nashville, Reading, Northern Pacific preferred, Western Union, all being prominent in the decline. Early Morning Gossip.

Dow, Jones & Co., New York. New York, March 24.—The suit for the annulment of the American Tobacco Company's charter in New Jersey comes up for final trial and settlement Thursday, March 26th. This suit was instituted by Attorney General Stockton after a great number of affidavits were offered and much testimony was given showing the method of consigning the trust's goods to jobbers, and Attorney General Stockton is quoted as saying he believes he has a winning case

In the afternoon a smart rally took place on covering of shorts, though the rallway shares showed only a moderate net loss as the result.

The feature of the Industrials was a break of over 2 per cent in Sugar on talk of the narrow margin between raw and refined sugars. American Tobacco was lower, but an effort to support the stock was apparent in the late dealings. Chicago Gas rallied nearly 2 points, though part of the gain was subsequently lost.

The market closed dull and irregular with concessions from the afternoon rally.

McIntyre & Wardwell's Cotton Letter.

New York, March 24.—The speculation here was very dull. Liverpool opened lower, both for futures and spots; trading was less active, southern spot markets were lower in some cases, the receipts at Cincinnati were large and those at the ports were rather liberal, and prices declined. The fluctuations, however, were within narrow limits, and trading was entirely local. At first prices declined to 2 points, then recovered the loss, but later on reacted and closed quiet and steady at 2 to 3 points below yesterday's closing, with sales of 79,700. Port receipts for the week are now estimated by some at 75,000, against earlier estimates in the week of 65,000. New Orleans was at one time 3 points lower, but afterwards recovered the decline. Liverpool declined 1-22d on spots with sales of 8,000 bales. Futures there dropped 1@1½ points, regained the loss and closed steady at about yesterday's close. Receipts at the ports today were 17,147, against 14,096 last week, 24,901 last year and 9,680 in 1894. Thus far last week. Riordan & Co.'s Cotton Letter.

New York, March 24.—(Special.)—This was the dullest day the cotton market has seen for a long time. Liverpool sent scant encouragement for the bulls, iyet during the foremon there was a show of firmness. In the afternoon it became apparent that the movement for the week would be much heavier than had been expected and prices yielded somewhat, but there was little trading and the extreme fluctuations of the day were within a range of only 4 points. May opened at 7.50, rallied to 7.53, declined to 7.53 and closed at 7.59.7.60, with the tone quiet and steady. The fact is that while there seems to be no inducement to buy, a few traders are willing to sell the spring and summer months short except for a quick turn. The danger of a squeeze is too manifest to everybody, and yet no squeeze may occur, but the feeling is growing that the fall months, even at the lower prices, are safer to sell. Riordan & Co.'s Cotton Letter.

The Sun's Cotton Review.

New York, March 24.—Cotton declined 1 to 2 points, then recovered the loss, but later on reacted and closed quiet at 2 to 3 points decline for the day with sales of 79,700 bales. The report receipts were 17,47, against 14,096 last week. Spot cotton here was unchanged with sales of 2,543 for export and 549 for spinning.

Today's Features—Lower early Liverpool cables and a free movement to the ports, together with large receipts at Cincinnati and lower spot markets, depressed prices. There was a rally at one time, but it was short-lived, for prices quickly reacted and declined again. The receipts at the ports New York, March 24.-Cotton declined :

for the week, which at one time were expected to approximate 65,000 bales, are now estimated at 75,000 bales. Manchester was dull, and outsiders are holding aloof from the market. The really worst feature is the dullness of speculation. There were 2,843 bales sold on the spot here today for direct shipment.

Hubbard Bros. & Co.'s Cotton Letter.

New York, March 24.—The markets have relapsed into dullness, while the movement of the crop as a result of the activity of the past ten days is relatively increasing, although there is no increase on the current estimate of 7,100,000 bales. Conditions of general trade now becoming visible to all are the result of overproduction and the large supplies purchased last fall under the belief that the demand from consumers would continue. Whether the conditions will change for the better all are able to judge up to the present time. From our point of view there is no improvement. The market is therefore left without an active demand from those sources which are expected at this season of the year to absorb the remaining portion of the crop, and the statistical position is so strong that all admit that any change for the better in trade conditions would bring about another sharp advance. It is this situation which creates stagnation, a condition in which the cotton trade is not alone. Our market today is practically without change from yesterday with the trade at sea regarding the future course of prices. It is estimated that the amount of cotton coming into sight this week will exceed last week by about 10,000 bales, and will be from 15,000 to 20,000 bales larger than the same week in 1873. This movement is certainly the result of the business transacted last week and had the effect of closing the market at the lowest prices of the day. Hubbard Bros. & Co.'s Cotton Letter.

The Dry Goods Market.

New York, March 24.—The Journal of Commerce and Commercial Bulletin, in its weekly review of the dry goods market, says: "The dry goods market has not developed favorable features during the past week in any direction. At first hands the general demand has been of previous character, almost entirely conservative in all stable lines of merchandise of both cotton and woolen goods. The attendance of buyers has been limited, and mail orders have been largely confined to covering quick requirements. The prolonged inactivity is puzzling sellers."

Cotton Notes.

3d, together with the bearish feeling that has prevalled, encouraged fresh selling around the opening and a break of 1/2c from last night's closing. This selling, however, was on a much lighter scale than yesterday and offerings were soon absorbed by shorts and scalpers who are rather inclined to buy under 62c. A reaction of 5/2c followed, the market holding firm the balance of the session. News was an unimportant character. Some damage reports from Indiana, Ohio and Kansas have been received. Northwestern receipts were again heavy. Duluth and Minnesota got 705 cars. Clearances were much larger than during the past few days at nearly 400,000 bushels, the heavy northwestern movement and unsatisfactory state of business are the discouraging features to holders. The uncertainty of the growing crop and the political situation abroad, together with a decline of 6c per bushel, and the probability that a further decline will bring out good export buying are the features which tend to make bears cautious in their selling just now.

The oats market was again heavy, May selling within 1/2c of 19c. The continued large receipts, fine weather and selling by local traders and holders seem about the only factors.

There was fresh liquidation in provisions. New York, March 24.—The market drags along without feature. Interest is daily concentrating in the progress of planting. All sections complain of a backward season. Europe is silent and sends no news, while opinion there is divided the same as here. Inman is believed to be out of the market.

Providence, R. I., in explanation of the bond business, says: "The mills will have to shut down 30 days unless they can dispose of a portion of their large stock of cloth."

pose of a portion of their large rototh."

The market opened pretty strong, although it was feared big exports from Port Royal and expected big clearances from Brunswick before the close of the week would swell the total ports buyers' expectations. Neither side was very demonstrative at the opening and prices were well maintained with no pronounced feeling either way.

well maintained with no pronounced feeling either way.

The bears are trying to depress the market with talk of a failure in dry goods trade here and another at Chicago.

There appears to be an undercurrent of buillish sentiment. The main reliance of buills the strong feeling in England and France. It is said that people would be inclined to buy there, but for the doleful accounts from this side. The big exports today encourage the bulls.

local traders and holders seem about the only factors.

There was fresh liquidation in provisions. Both holders and packers were free sellers. Shorts seemed to be the best buyers. Trading was large and the markets showed some reaction near the close. We favor the long side on this decline. There was, however, a much better foreign and domestic demand. The trade in that line was quite large. Cash lard solda t 507½c, the lowest on record, and may prove low for some time to come.

FINANCIAL.

J. C. KNOX, Broker,

Provisions today have been surprisingly weak, there apparently being left a great deal more liqudation of longs than imagined. There has been a lot of selling today by commission houses, evidently outside liquidation. Schwartz, Dupree, Logan George, Thorne and others have led in the selling. The only support is from packers—Niles, Dobbins, Switt, Hately and others. Baldwin has been doing a lot of changing, buying May ribs and selling July. The buying by packers is apparently only of the scalping sort, covering short 333 and 335 Equitable building. Phone 1287.

A Philadelphia Tribute.

The Philadelphia Sunday Graphic of re-cent date has this handsome tribute to one of Atlanta's most beloved women: the imported domestics are said to be very much affected by the life of the town. Vegetables are rare and poor, and a fortune is said to await the man who undertakes gardening in Johannesberg.

The Woman's Club.

The Atlanta Woman's Club had a delightful meeting yesterday afternoon. Its president, Mrs. W. B. Lowe, returned in the morning from New York, where she had been invited to attend the annual anniversary breakfast given by Sorosis. It was a great compliment for Mrs. Lowe to have been invited to this breakfast, when one considers that only 100 guests are summoned each year from various parts of the country, and that Mrs. Lowe should have received the invitation during this, her first year in feminine clubdom. But she is a leading Atlanta woman, which explains much to our self-satisfied souls and more than that she is one of those clever people who can make their brains and personality a power in any sort of leadership.

Cent date has this handsome tribute to one of Atlanta's most beloved women:

"It is a remarkable organization of which the city of Atlanta boasts when it speaks of its Woman's Aid Society. It is remarkable, if for no other reason, because every one of its accomplished members is so thoroughly in earnest. Charitable work is sometimes, though sorry to relate, a fad picked up by society women who find in it a novelty and diversion from the usual round of receptions, teas and cotilions, and it also serves well to kill time during the found of receptions, teas and cotilions, and it also serves well to kill time during the found of receptions, teas and cotilions, and it also serves well to kill time during the found of receptions, teas and cotilions, and it also serves well to kill time during the found of receptions, teas and cotilions, and it also serves well to kill time during the found of receptions, teas and cotilions, and it also serves well to kill time during the found of receptions, teas and cotilions, and it also serves well to kill time during the found of receptions, teas and cotili

"One of the most beautiful things in club life," she said, "seemed to me to be in the graceful way it makes women grow old. Why, at that reunion there were old ladies of seventy—handsome, alert, up to the times in every way. Why, it don't seem to me that women ever can get old in the behind-hand sense of the world with such surroundings and influences as she has in the highest type of woman's

After this general talk she spoke of some new ideas that her ready wit had gleaned for application here, and then the discussion of the delegates for the meeting of the National Federation of Woman's Clubs was brought up. Mrs. Lowe nominated Mrs. Heber C. Reed, and she was unani-mously elected, and when she stated that she might not be able to attend. Mrs. John Ottley was elected as an alternate.

After this Mrs. Heber C. Reed read a short and clever little paper on civics and followed it by a suggestion that Mrs. John Ottley read a poem, "To Conservatism," by that brilliant writer Charlotte Perkins Stetson. The lines made a bright ripple in more serious affairs, telling as they did the story of the newly-hatched butterfly that didn't like its wings and didn't want to fly and insisted in crawling back into its coccoon. It was a clever bit of satire on the woman of today who won't be progressive and persists in closing her eyes to the progress about her.

After this bright bit of verse Miss Whaley read a short, clever paper on social questions, and the meeting concluded with music, several beautiful ballads being rendered in Mr. Owens's happiest and mos expressive style. After this the company broke up into little groups and tea was served and sipped in cozy feminine fashion. The club increases in membership and prosperity each week and there is no

PURPOSE OF THEOSOPHY.

Mr. Harding Lectured Again Last Night.

Last night Mr. Burcham Harding delivered another lecture on theosophy in Atlanta. The subject last night was "The Purpose of Theosophy." Quite a large audience heard the lecture.

"The purpose of theosophy," said Mr.
Harding, "is to define clearly the aim of Harding, "is to define clearly the aim of life and to point out how it can be attained. The purpose is to spread a right philisophy or guide for moral conduct, as practical benefits will follow when mankind is convinced of the necessity of following the dictates of right philosophy."

Mr. Harding spoke for some time on the different ways in which theosophy helped and concluded as follows:

"The nurpose of theosophy is to incul-and concluded as follows:

"The purpose of theosophy is to inculcate the universality of law, to show that each human being is a part of the whole; his recognition of the general welfare as paramount over his selfish interests will be the basis upon which social, political and national troubles and conflicts will be settled. No other solution can be permanent, for the laws of causation, and that the unit is subservient to the whole are foundation stones in nature. Any attempt to build on other methods will surely end in disaster. The purpose of the theosophical society is to spread a knowledge of this philosophy, that we may have a clear guide as to the right aim of life, and know what steps are necessary to attain it."

The Children of Edward Petty Appeal to the Courts.

CITY PROPERTY IS AT STAKE

An Interesting Question Was Sprung in the Superior Court Yesterday Morning.

An interesting case is now pending in the civil branch of the superior court in which the interests of several minor children are Several weeks ago the minor children of

Edward Petty, deceased, filed a petition in regard to certain interests which they held in a piece of property on Summit avenue, claiming that deeds had been made in error to parties other than themselves, and who

The suit was filed by Attorneys W. H. & E. R. Black, representing Anne Petty, Foster Petty, Ed Petty, Jr., Matilda Petty Foster Petty, Ed Petty, Jr., Matllda Petty and Annie Petty, who claim to be the only legal heirs of Edward Petty, whose death occurred several years ago. The petition alleges that the property is now in the possession of H. T. Inman, A. M. Reinhardt and L. W. Wimby, who have collected the annual rents of the property for some time.

The petitioners claim that Edward Petty, at the time of his death, held a bond for title from Annie Ford, on which he had, with the aid of the petitioners, paid the sum of $175, the amount stated in the bond for title being $600.

It is alleged that at the time of the death of Edward Petty, Eliza Petty, a woman claiming to be the wife of Petty, agreed with Annie Ford to convey to her one-half of the property if Annie Ford would convey the south half to her. It s also claimed that Petty's first wife was then living and is now still alive and that there has never been any legal separation between her and her husband.

It was brought out in the trial yesterday that Eliza Petty did not know that Petty had a living wife, but married him in good faith, believing that he was not married at the time. The evidence developed that she married him, believing that she had a perfect right to do so and knew nothing of the first wife.

The petitioners agreed to tender to the perfect right to do so and knew nothing of the first wife.

The petitioners agreed to tender to the maker of the bond for title the sum of $425, which is the balance that has never been paid on the original deal. This money was tendered yesterday in court, with legal interest, which has accrued on the amount since it was past due.

The bond for title is not defended by Annie Ford, but by H. T. Inman, A. M. Reinhardt and L. W. Wimby. The case will probably be concluded today and a verdict will be reached by the jury.

The object of the suit is to compel Annie Ford, the maker of the bond, to carry out the terms of the contract on the payment of the remaining balance by the heirs. It is also asked that the possession of the ofher parties to the property be set aside, as it is claimed to be a cloud upon the title to the land. It is asked, too, that the property be conveyed to the heirs under the original bond for title which was made by Annie Ford to Edward Petty before his death.

The suit was originally brought against L. W. Wimby, but the netitioners claimed.

fore his death.

The suit was originally brought against L. W. Wimby, but the petitioners claimed that he had sold the property to his wife and the case was dismissed as to him and brought directly against his wife. An amendment was filed yesterday alleging in addition to the other allegations that the parties now in possession took the property with implied legal notice of the rights of the minors.

Nearly all of the allegations of the petitioners are denied in the answer which has been filed by the defendants.

GETS THREE YEARS

Bryan Was Convicted of Involuntary Manslaughter.

HE KILLED KATIE WOODS

Judge Candler Gave Him the Full Penalty Allowed by the Law. Goes to the Pen.

J. P. Bryan, charged with the murder of Katle Woods, was yesterday sentenced to three years in the penitentiary by Judge Candler, of the superior court.

The argument was concluded at 2:39 o'clock and the jury was charged by the judge. After being out about thirty minutes the jury returned a verdict of involuntary manslaughter and a sentence of three years, the full limit allowed by law, was placed upon the prisoner.

The wife and seven children of the ac used were present in the courtroom and had heard all of the testimony both for the state and defense. Mrs. Bryan was com-pletely overcome when the verdict was read and she wept aloud as the sentence was eing pronounced. Yesterday morning argument was begun in the case, as all of the testimony had been given on the day before. The argument was opened by Solicitor Hill, representing the state. He was followed Mr. Eugene Mitchell and Mr. Reuben Arnold and then Solicitor Hill closed for

The charge of Judgé Candler was especially clear and strong and he told the jurors what composed homicide and mur-der. The jury was not out very long before a verdict was agreed upon as above stated. Judge Candler told the prisoner that he had done well to escape a verdict charging him with murder. He then imposed the

him with murder. He then imposed the full limit of the law upon the prisoner.

Bryan will be transferred to one of the convict camps as soon as arrangements can be made by the state. He will be confined in the jail until arrangements for his transfer are completed. Bryan asserted his innocence of intent to murder during the entire trial and insisted that the killing was purely an accident. Several testified that he had been guilty of criminal relations with the woman and killed her in a fit of jealous rage. His statement was that he stopped by the house on his way to his home to collect a bill which the woman owed for groceries, and as he was about to leave the room his pistol was accidentally discharged.

The damage suit which has been filed through the attorneys of Jenks Morris against the city was reached yesterday morning in the second division of the city court and will be concluded today.

Morris alleges that his property at the corner of Vine and Magnolia streets has been badly damaged by the city. He alleges that a grade has recently been made through the streets named and on account of this excavation his property has been left high and dry above the street without any means of approach.

WOMEN'S NERVES

ONLY TOO OFTEN THEY ARE OUT OF TONE.

To Those of the Gentler Sex, Suffering from Nervous Debility, a Boon

It is no longer either fashionable on the one hand or a matter of reproach on the other to have "nerves" and know it. Women, from their keener, more delicate organization are more subject to nerve troubles—to prostration, exhaustion, sleeplessness, lack of vigor in mind or body, dyspepsia, neuralgia and all the rest of the kindred evils—than men are. And they suffer more when unstrung. Fortunately they respond more readily than men to a remedy. That a sure specific for, nervous troubles is within woman's ready reach is not open to question. Thousands know this to be true. Here are a few expressions from hundreds received within the last two months:

THE CASE AGAINST H. M. ROTH-ERY WAS NOL PROSSED.

Evidence Against Him Was Weak-He Was Charged with Stealing

arrested last fall on the charge of having stolen diamonds from the Freeman Jewelry Company, is a free man today. After having spent several weeks in jail his case was nol prossed yesterday on the motion of Solicitor Charley Hill, representing the state. The motion to nol pros the case was made in the criminal superior court Monday morning, but Judge Candler stated that he would reserve his decision in the matter until he had made a careful review of the case.

Yesterday morning Judge Candler announced that he would grant the motion to not pros the case and the clerk of the court was instructed to take an order dismissing the charges against the pris-oner. Yesterday afternoon Rothery walked from the Fulton county jail a free man and in a few days he will leave for his home in Omaha. His wife and two chil-dren, who have been in the city for several days, will return with him.

Rothery's young wife was overjoyed yesterday when she learned that the yesterday when she learned that the charges had been dismissed and she was one of the first to bear the glad tidings of liberty to her husband. She came to Atlanta about two weeks ago and with her came her two children. Since her arrival in the city she has visited her husband daily at the jail. She will return with her husband probably this afternoon to their former home in Omaha.

The Evidence Was Circumstantial.

The Evidence Was Circumstantial.

When the case was reached Monday morning Solicitor Hill stated to the court that he desired to have the case against Rothery dismissed or nol prossed, as the state had not sufficient evidence with which to convict the prisoner.

Mr. Freeman was placed upon the witness stand and he testified that he could not swear Rothery took the diamonds, as the same tray of goods was shown to several others and no one in the store saw Rothery or his companion take the goods. The motion to nol pros the case was then taken under advisement by Judge Candler and he stated that he would reserve his decision. Yesterday morning he granted the motion and an order was later on in the day presented to Jailer Eubanks for the release of Rothery.

Rothery announced that he would do all in his power to locate Dale and would notify the authorities if he succeeded. He said that he had known Dale only a short while, as he had never seen him before

WILL DR. HAWTHORNE LEAVE? Thought Probable That He May Be

Called to Nashville, Tenn. Since Sunday there has been current a rumor that Dr. J. B. Hawthorne, pastor of the First Baptist church, was about to be called to the pulpit of the First Baptist church of Nashville, he having preached before the members of that congregation on Sunday last, and from all reports of the sermons he gave they must have been bursts of unusual eloquence from that well-known divine. Notwithstanding the fact that at present there is no near probability of the preacher departing from Atlanta, it has been known that Nashville Baptists were anxious to have their pulpit occupied by one who has risen to such a height of prominence among the Baptist divines of the country. Dr. Hawthorne has been for twelve years at the head of the most prominent Baptist congregation in Atlanta, and in the south for that matter, and dur-ing this lapse of so many years he has endeared himself to the hearts of all who have come in contact with him personally or with his matchless elequence when advocating any of the many reforms which he has during these years set on foot.

The fact that the pulpit of the First Baptist church of the Tennessee capital is vacant and the invitation to occupy it for last Sunday, together with the deep impression made by this noted divine upon all who heard him, no doubt gives apparent foundation to the rumor that he will in the near future be called to that charge.

When seen yesterday regarding the rumor Dr. Hawthorne said that he had received the invitation to preach in Nashville from Mr. J. W. Thomas, president of the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railway, and that not until he had arrived at his destination did he learn that he was looked upon as a candidate for the vacancy then existing in the pastorate of the church.

Regarding his acceptance in the event is vacant and the invitation to occupy vacancy then existing in the pastorate of the church.

Regarding his acceptance in the event of the call from Nashville being made to him he would not say anything, remarking that he did not care to discuss a matter of such indefinite proportions.

The morning and evening sermons of Dr. Hawthorne at the First Baptist church, at Nashville, on Sunday last, were attended by congregations that packed that well-known edifice to its utmost capacity, and the discourses were said to have been speciments of matchless eloquence and the best heard in many years in the Tennessee capital.

CROSSLEY BOUND OVER.

The Young Man Put Under a $200 Bond.

Thad Crossley, the young man that was arrested last Saturday for the theft of a diamond ring from the jewelry store of A. F. Pickert, on Whitehall street, was tried F. Pickert, on Whitehall street, was tried before Judge Bloodworth yesterday and pleaded guilty. He said he sold the ring to a drummer at the Kimball house Saturday night, receiving $15 for it. He said he did not know the name of the drummer. Crossley was released on a $200 bond. Efforts are being made to discover the name of the traveling man who bought the ring.

THE CASE APPEALED.

The Southern Railway Carries a Case to the U. S. Court of Appeals. The Southern Railway Company yester-day appealed the decision of the United States court of this circuit in the case of George W. Henry against the Southern Railway Company. Some time last year George W. Henry entered suit against the Southern railway for personal damages done to him while an employe of that company. The case was tried in the United States court, before was treed in the United States court, before Judge Newman, and a verdict was rendered allowing Henry damages against the Southern in the sum of $4,500. The Southern was not satisfied with the verdict and tried to get a new trial, but this was not granted granted.

They, therefore, yesterday appealed the case to the United States court of appeals, at New Orleans. They will fight the verdict of Judge Newman's court with all their might.

THE LYNCHING OF MURPHY.

Prisoners Say That Only Three Men Entered the Jail.

Chattanooga, Tenn., March 24.—(Special.) Word was received here from the scene of Sunday's lynching at Huntsville, Tenn., says that there is just indignation expressed on all sides and a strong effort will be made to bring the guilty parties to justice. Prisoners in the jail say that only three men entered it to take Murphy out and that the man he called John was a brother-inlaw of the man be had murdered. From all indications there were not more than ten men in the party and they all rode out the Jacksboro road in the dhection of Campbell county, where Bowling's friends live.

FOUND NOT GUILTY

John White, the Route Agent, Before Judge Newman Yesterday.

TECHNICALITY SAVED HIM

He Is the Postal Clerk Who, It Was Charged, Was Caught by a Decoy Letter.

Through a technicality John T. White the route agent accused of stealing money from letters, was found not guilty yesterday in the United States court.

White was until about the 20th of last May a nostal clerk on the Georgia rail road between Atlanta and Augusta. About this time last year he was suspended from service because of charges brought against him by Postoffice Inspectors Jones and Bul-

Awhile before the arrest of White fre quent complaints of money lost in letters sent over the Georgia road reached the ears of the postoffice inspectors. Numbers of complaints were made to them by parties who had sent money to the Agnes Scott institute, at Decatur, and a college in Augusta, the money never reaching those col-

About May 20th, last, Postoffice Inspector Jones wrote a letter to H. J. Williams, who is secretary and treasurer of the Agnes Scott institute. In this letter he inclosed $2, and it was mailed on the train on which White went to Augusta. It was a decoy letter and it served the purposes from all appearances. On the same train the letter was mailed Postoffce Inspectors Jones and was mailed Postoffce Inspectors Jones and Bulwer left Atlanta. White went on the train as route agent. On reaching Decatur Mr. Jones got off the train, his purpose being to see whether or not the decoy letter he had mailed was delivered. After the postmaster had distributed the mail brought by Route Agent White it was discovered by Inspector Jones that the letter had not been left at Decatur as it should have been. Mr. Jones telegraphed Mr. Bulwer, who remained on the Augusta train, the result remained on the Augusta train, the result of his search for the letter at the postof-fice at Decatur, and then Mr. Bulwer went into the postal car and made a search for

Into the postal car and made a scatter.

It could not be found. White was confronted with the circumstances and he claimed that he left the letter at Decatur. The letter was never seen after it was mailed in Atlanta, except by some one in the postal car, and White was arrested. He claimed all the while that he had either left the letter at Decatur or sent it back left the letter at Decatur or sent it back on another train.

In the trial yesterday before Judge Newman all the above facts were brought out. The property of the second of the second white was set free. The prosecutors say the reason the verdict was in favor of White was because of a little legal technicality of which Judge Newman took cognizance and called the jury's attention to The technicality which it is claimed freed White was committed.

The technicality which it is claimed freed White is this:

White was committed by Commissioner Broyles and when the indictment was made out against him in the higher court it was according to the report sent up by the commissioner. This report differed from the evidence brought out yesterday in one little point, and consequently the charge in the indictment against White was at variance in this point with the actual charge against him. Commissioner Broyles stated that Inspector Jones swore in the commitment trial that he had addressed the decoyletter to H. J. Williams, secretary and treasurer of Agnes Scott institute, Decatur, Ga., whereas Inspector Jones swore in Judge Newman's court that the letter was addressed to H. J. Williams, secretary and treasurer, Decatur, Ga.—that it did not have the words "Agnes Scott Institute" on it. Judge Newman held that this was a material variance and the jury accordingly found a verdict of not guilty. Mr. Jones says that the variance was not his fault, that it was a mistake of the commissioners in reporting the case. He says that he did not put the words "Agnes Scott Institute" in his testimony before Commissioner Broyles.

District Attorney James is not satisfied and another indictment will be brought against White on Monday, and he will be carried before Judge Newman again. The new indictment will be made to tally exactly with the charges against White.

SHE SMILED SWEETLY

On the Manly Man in the Full Vigor of His Magnetic Manhood.

No Use Now-a-Days for Puny, Debilitated Individuals-Everybody Can Be Quickly, Easily, Permanent ly Made Happy.

Sparkling eyes, a quick-beating heart, and the rosy blush of f pleasure greet ly man when he r meets his lady love. That is the love. That is the kind of man whose very touch thrills because it is full of energy, the kind of man whose very touch thrills because it is full of energy, and vitality. That is the kind of man that every man should be, and his magnetic presence would make everybody happy around him. Why is it not so? One of the principal reasons is the universally prevailing tobacco habit. Tobacco kills nerve. Stay with tobacco long enough and every man will be a sallow, skinny, nerveless wreck, inspiring disgust instead of love and affection. No man who uses tobacco can be as much of a man as without it.

No grasp so strong as the death grip of a habit, and man once fully in its clutches is helpless without aid. That's why every tobacco-user has the same good excuse—"I can't quit." No-To-Bac removes this only excuse, and any one who will can quit easily, quickly and permanently. Here's an instance:

Made His Wife Happy.

Made His Wife Happy.

"Chestline, O., June 5.—Dear Sirs: NoTo-Bac has entirely cured me of the use of tobacco, and the result of the treatment has been a surprise to myself and friends. Now when I am offered a chew or smoke by my friends it is declined with thanks, and I refer them to No-To-Bac. I could not begin to tell you how many times my wife has thanked your No-To-Bac for what it has done in my case.

This is only one of thousands. Talk with-your wife about it, and start your cure today. No-To-Bac is not sold on the recommendation of men like Mr. McCully, one of over 300,000 cases cured, but can be obtained from any druggist in the United States or Canada under absolute guarantee of cure or money refunded.

Our booklet, "Don't Tobacco Spit and Smoke Your Life Away," written guarantee of cure and sample sent free. Address the Sterling Remedy Company, Chicago or New York.

At the close of the sermon every railroad man in the house came forward and shook Mr. Jones's hand, promising to lead a new life. It was a sight to see the scores of horny-handed men go up with tears and pledge themselves to better living.

After the crowd had been dismissed a beautiful gold-headed umbrella was presented to Mr. Jones in a neat speech by one of the officers of the Southern railway. It had on the handle this inscription:

His preaching and pointing out the 'Lamb of God' was no accident."

In the Afternoon. A very large audience greeted the preach er at the tabernacle at 3 o'clock. The singing prior to the preaching was conducted by Mr. Charley Tillman. The large crowd that attended the afternoon services attests the religious fervor that is present in Atlanta, and the interest is keen in all directions

The preacher found his text in the book of Amos: "Prepare to meet thy God," fourth chapter and twelfth verse. He said fourth chapter and twelfth verse. He said that in the outset of his career as a preacher he had an idea that large numbers of people would get to heaven, but as he learned more of God and of His book, his later convictions were that it would take a first-class character to enable one to reach heaven, and the gist of the discourse was that regeneration was necessary in order to salvation. Morality and rectitude of life without spiritual birth would ultimate in disaster as a claim to heaven. "Ye must be born again."

without spiritual birth would ultimate in disaster as a claim to heaven. "Ye must be born again."

He said in so important a matter as salvation it behooved God to warn mankind of the dangers of being lost. He said God had done this, and we ought to listen to the warning voice of God.

This he said had been done. He used four pictures that contained messages of warning. First, the parable of the virgins. Five of them were wise and five were foolish. The five foolish were outwardly religious, but not inwardly prepared to meet God, and urged that the mere formal profession would not, could not, save. He said many people had given their hands to the preacher in these meetings, but they must go on in the work until they could say they feit the joy of pardon in their hearts.

When the people were invited forward, evidencing their determination to get ready to meet God, on actual count one hundred and forty-seven gave their hands to Mr. Stuart, and the service closed with a fervent prayer by Rev. Dr. Kendall.

"All a man needs is to think rightly and act promptly. I want to say that thinking life, as I see it, every man knows that right is right and that wrong is wrong, and that the best thing a man can do is to do right and the worst thing he can do is to do wrong. I will do right. I may lose friends, place, position, but I

"Give me the workman who says the best thing to do is to do right; I will be faithful; when working on the engine he is faithful. I may be on the train, hurrying at fifty miles an hour to see my dying child; the may be on the train, hurrying at fifty miles an hour to see my dying child; the faithful work of the faithful workman is my guarantee of safety. "But the thought that I have a soul in my body that shall live when engines and cars are of no more use should prompt me to do my best work to save it. Yet some of you are stabbing it with drunkenness, profanity and lust. You have got to die. Your wife will kiss your cold lips the last time and you will leave these shops for time and you will leave these shops for the bar of God. If there is any class of men I like it is railroad men. Whisky will ruin any man. You have to sweat to get your dollars. I know what that means. How foolish to throw away these hard-earned dollars in drink and gambling. You ought not to swear. Give up everything that sets a bad example to your children. If you can't get a fellow to do right through love to his wife and children then the last handle is broken off by which you can reach him. The cheap rates given during the exposition are bearing fruit. Wherever a meeting or convention is to be held, an application is made for a rate of 1 cent a mile. An application is on file for a cent a mile rate for the reunion of confederate veter-ans at Charleston. A rate of a fare and a third was granted at the Richmond meet erage only about 86 cents per train mile. With the exception of the Texas lines, the roads of the Southern Passenger Association get the least revenue of all the roads in this country per mile from their passenger trains. In New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania and New England states, the earnings per train mile are much larger than the south, while the passenger rates are smaller. There are more trains, more pas-sengers and less charge per mile. The northern lines, the expense is below 40 cents a mile. In the south, the cost is much higher, often running up to 70 cents and above. A high-class train like the Southern's vestibuled or the Seahoard's sp cial costs twice as much as the ordinary train of passenger coaches.

The cost per train mile is probably less

As to Mileage Books

Judge Bailey Thomas, commissioner of the Southern States Passenger Association, leaves today for Chicago, where he will attends a meeting of other passenger association officials. The lines above the Potomac and the Ohio have a number of questions to settle. The question of commissions will probably come up. There may be some discussion over the interchangeable mileage book, which has been withdrawn by the lines above the Ohio river. the lines above the Ohio river.

The facts that the books are freely scalped has been mentioned in The Constitution The weaker lines got very little revenue out of the books legitimately. So some of them sold books to the scalpers and got the ready cash.

Congressman John W. Maddox, of the he ready cash.

A strange thing about mileage books is seventh Georgia district, passed through the city yesterday on his way to Rome. Judge Maddox thought that he would drop that 25 per cent of the mileage sold never shows up in the auditing office. The mileage is all used. That can be set down. What becomes of the 25 per cent that is not turned in to the companies?

One explanation is that the conductor lose much of it, for the mileage coupons are small and there is nothing on them to identify them. The road which sells the book makes clear all that is not sent back. The strong lines have the best of the mileage book system so long as the weak lines "tote fair." But when they carry $15,000 worth of mfleage books to scalpers at one time and sell them, the stroner lines get the worst of the arrangement.

George Washington Tilley Was Tempted To Impersonate Another Man.

HE MUST SERVE THREE YEARS

Sentence Passed on Him Yesterday by Judge Newman for Using the Name of James Forrester.

George Washington Tilley was convicted resterday of impersonating another man in Judge Newman to the Ohlo state prison for

James F. Forrester draws a pension from the United States for service rendered in the civil and Indian wars. He lives in Pick-ens county, near Talking Rock, where Tilley lives. Forrester's pension money comes through the mails to Talking Rock, and last fall when the time came for him to receive a check from Uncle Sam for $30, he did not receive it. He was greatly worried over the failure of the check to reach him as usual, and commenced to write to Washington about the supposed delay. He was notified from Washington that the check had been Forrester had begun to think that he had Tost his quarterly pension from the gov-ernment until he was advised from Wash-ington that the check they had sent him had come back to the bank there with his name written upon it. The letter stated that the signature was not that of Forrester, however, and it was for this reason that Forrester was written to. The check was not accepted at Washington, it seems. Finally, after much tracing, Forrester found out enough to give him cause to have George Washington Tilley, a near neighbor, arrested. Tilly was accused of getting hold of the check before it reached Forrester from the Talking Rock postoffice and cashing it through a merchant at Talking Rock. The check naturally found its way back to Washington, where it was discovered that Forrester's name, as signed to the check, was not his signature.

Tilley was arrested and his case went to the United States court, as he was charged with appropriating a check sent by the government. No one seems to know how Tilley received the check unless he had some one to call for Forrester's mail at the Talking Rock postoffice at the time when he knew Forrester's quarterly check was there.

The jury found Tilley guilty and he was had come back to the bank there with his

The jury found Tilley guilty and he was sentenced to pay a fine of $100 and serve three years in the Ohio state prison.

CONDUCTOR WELCH RELEASED.

He Has Settled Differences with the Consolidated Company.

W. O. Welch, the ex-Consolidated conluctor, was released from jail yesterday. Welch was carried to jail to await pre-liminary hearing before a justice of the peace on the charge of larceny after trust. Welch was formerly a conductor in the employ of the Consolidated Street Railway Company. He was charged by Superintendent Hurt with failing to ring up fares to the amount of about $12. When his shortage was discovered Superinten-dent Hurt told him that he would have him arrested unless he paid up within a certain stated time. Welch failed to settle with the company and Mr. Hurt went before Judge Bloodworth and swore out a warrant for larceny after trust. A GRAND DISPLAY

Of Trimmed Hats and Bonnets at the Popular House of E. M. Bass & Co. Yesterday was the first of the two days of the spring opening of millinery at 3 Whitehall street, and although the day was cloudy the ladies were out in full force viewing the grand collections. This is the first season in millinery with Messrs. E. M. Bass & Co., and the ladies were highly delighted at the display and more than all at the prices which prevailed. One lady remarked as she purchased a "This is the prettiest hat I have seen this season at any price and I have seen this season at any price and I have visited every millinery establishment in this city." Now if the ladies of Atlanta and Georgia will stop and think of the enormous prices asked and received by others they will say that this was quite a compliment. All who called at the open-ing remarked that the prices were less than half what others asked. Tomorrow Messrs. Bass & Co. will continue their display and everybody is invited, and the husbands of thousands of ladies will be made happy to think their wives can now have a place where they can buy at a moderate price and still be as pretty and

Is Your Wife Fussy?

Malaria and Rheumatism From The Wilmington, O., Journal.
On one of the fertile farms of the rich Ohlo valley, seven miles from Wilmington, the county seat of Clinton county, Ohlo, and but a small distance from the sr all town of Melvin, their postoffice, in a cozy, little country home, resides John Arrasmith and his wife, Minnle.

A few days since a rousescriptive of The and his wife, Minnie.

A few days since a representative of The Journal drove out to Melvin to see them. In the course of the conversation, Mrs. A. detailed the facts of her cure:

"Last July," said she, "from undue exposure in my work about the farm, I contracted malarial fever and rheumatism and suffered from the illness greatly. I could not throw it off, and although constantly attended by local physicians. constantly attended by local physicians.

stantly attended by local physicians, con-tinued to grow worse. In September I caught a severe cold, which greatly intinued to grow worse. In September a caught a severe cold, which greatly increased my other troubles, and taking to my bed there I lay for months. The rheumatism grew more aggravated, and for eight long weeks prior to last Christmas I was perfectly helpless, my limbs below the hips being as if paralyzed and I having no use of them whatever. I could not no use of them whatever. I could not help myself in any way, and was not able to turn over in bed unless my husband or some one else came and turned me. Medicines which the physicians left did no good, and nothing I could take afforded any relief. I was discouraged and feared that heat and a characteristics. that never again would I be up and about that never again would I be up and about the house. It was anything but a bright prospect, for I was but twenty years old, had been married only two years, and my life was before me; and to go through it a helpless cripple, a burden to my friends, life was before me; and to go through it a helpless cripple, a burden to my friends, was a fearful fate to think of.

"I had read in The Wilmington Journal from time to time, articles teiling of the wonderful cures which had been effected by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and had become impressed with the cases where they had caused persons to walk and recover who had been as helpless as I was. Consulting my husband, we determined to give them a trial. So he drove into Wilmington, and, going to the drug store of George W. Brown, bought three boxes of the pills. I began taking them immediately upon his return. That was about the first of the present year. Before the first box was gone I began to realize that I was getting better, and by the time I finished the second box the pain with which I had been suffering for nearly six months and the disease which had made me helpless for eight weeks, disappeared entirely, and I got up. I took the taird box of the pills, and have never felt a twinge of rheumatism since, and I am doing my daily work and feeling as well as anybody."

To confirm the story, Mrs. Arrasmith made the following affidavit:

"Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence, at Wilmington, O., this 29th day of June, 1895. C. Q. HILDEBRANT,

"Clerk of Court."
